STRIKE ON M'KINLEY LINE TIES UP TRAFFIC

100 Illinois Towns Affected by Walkout — Carmen Willing to Yield Part of Demands.

ONLY TWO DIVISIONS STILL IN OPERATION

About 350 Workers Out, Demanding Wage Increase, Pay for Overtime and Closed Shop Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 8.—Coming from the closed conference of striking Illinois Traction System trainmen at noon today, A. McGuire, international representative of the Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, declared the men were willing to yield their demands for a 10 per cent increase if the company would grant them time and a half for overtime work.

Passenger and freight service on the Illinois Traction System (McKinley lines) remained tied up today following a strike at 12:01 a. m. yesterday of motormen, conductors and brakemen on all main lines.

More than 100 towns and villages in Southern and Central Illinois are without interurban service. Not a car is moving on 400 miles out of the system's total mileage of 500. The St. Louis-Granite City and the Joliet-Princeton divisions are the only ones still in operation.

About 350 Men Out.

About 350 men are on strike. They are demanding an increase of 10 cents an hour in wages, extra pay for overtime work and closed shop conditions. Under the contract, which expired Dec. 1, trainmen were getting 50 cents, passenger motormen and conductors 62½ and freight crew men 65 cents.

Vice President D. W. Snyder of the Illinois Traction System issued a statement from Springfield last night in which he asserted the strikers' committee of five had dealt unfairly with the company and the public by giving only six hours' notice of the intention to strike.

Tildon E. Goddard of St. Louis, a member of the committee, today said Snyder's statement was untruthful. He said negotiations between company executives and trainmen's representatives were held for two weeks and notice of the strike was served at 3 p. m. Friday.

No Property Damage.

"The strike will be absolutely peaceful on our part," Goddard said. "During the 1918 strike not 5 cents worth of the company's property was damaged and we can guarantee the same now. If necessary our men will volunteer to guard the properties."

Workers were polled on the question of striking, Goddard said, and the vote was 267 for and 18 against, some others not voting. Goddard added that 300 of the strikers are members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America and the rest are new men.

Passenger men are asking time and a half pay for more than nine hours' work daily and freight men are asking the same for more than 10 hours. The reason for this, according to Goddard, is not so much to obtain extra pay as it is to eliminate lengthy working periods.

The contract of crews on trains between St. Louis and Granite City is with the St. Louis Electric Terminal Railway Co., a subsidiary of the I. T. S., and they are not affected by the strike. Workers on the Joliet-Princeton division likewise have a separate contract.

No Attempt to Break Strike.

No attempts have been made by officials of the I. T. S. to break the strike, so far as could be learned, and no trouble at any point was reported today. The company contends it is financially unable to meet the demands of the strikers.

"The general interurban situation throughout the country is far from satisfactory," Vice President Snyder said. "Great inroads have been made by the private automo-

Vampire Gayly Predicts Execution of Accomplice

Haarman Declares Grans, Who Bought Clothes of Victims, Always Was Urging Him "to Pick Well-Dressed Men."

HANOVER, Dec. 8.—In his prison cell yesterday, Fritz Haarman, vampire murderer of 27 men, who killed with his teeth, was almost merry in sharp contrast to his abject terror during his trial, now in session, and before that in jail.

The man smiled slyly as he paced his cell, rubbing his sweating palms together. His jailer who stood by with a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World, asked the cause of this merriment.

"I am happy," Haarman ejaculated eagerly, "for Grans is going with me."

Hans Grans is being tried as Haarman's accomplice. He is said to have bought the clothes of the vampire's victims, perhaps to have prompted some of the crimes, and, according to Haarman, sold some of the sausage meat the killer made from the human flesh. Grans admits he bought secondhand clothes from Haarman but protests he knew nothing of the manner in which they were obtained.

"He Will Die With Me."

But the butcher's pasty face almost glowed as he repeated with manifest satisfaction:

"Yes, he will die with me, the liar." Then catching sight of the strange face of the correspondent, the man became loquacious.

"You know, they accuse me of murdering young boys of 10, 12 of them. I don't like young boys.

"I never murdered a young boy, why should I? I remember older men and the police know I have tried to hide nothing. But it is so taxing. They show me photographs. 'Did you kill this one?' How can I remember?

"There was the body and Grans came. Yes, he came and he saw the body and helped me dispose of it too, the liar. He was always saying: 'This one's clothes are not much. Why don't you get good clothes? Why don't you pick up well-dressed men, not such tramps?'

"Yes, and he sold the clothes—and the meat, too, and now he wants to put all the blame on me. I have no use for a man of no character. Am I right?"

Physicians have called Haarman the "Untermensch," the less-than-man, the direct antithesis of the superman. He looks it. It is the fashion now to ask murderers what books they read and then comment on the mildness of the unfortunate. Haarman is mild enough in aspect, but asked about his literary taste, he said:

"I Never Knew," Says Grans.

"No, I never have time for books." He rubbed his hands, again wet with perspiration, and returned to the subject that interested him most.

"Grans will die too, won't he? That pleases me." He was still shuffling up and down his cell, eyes aglow, hands clenched and pale lips twisted into a smile when the correspondent went to visit Grans.

"I never knew," he insisted. "Haarman was so strange. Yes, we had an understanding; I was loyal to him, but I never knew of his murders. It was always a mystery to me where the clothes came from. But you can see he is an insane man. He accuses me, but no one will take the accusation seriously. I have never done anything criminal in my life."

ILL-FATED FORTUNE OF THE MILLIONAIRE ORPHAN TO CHARITY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—Childhood hopes of William Nelson McClintock that the great fortune of his family should be used in "doing good" are going to come true.

The will of the youthful heir of the so-called ill-fated fortune which approximates $5,000,000, was said yesterday by a friend of McClintock to contain provisions dedicating the bulk of the money to charitable enterprises. W. D. Sheppard, one of McClintock's guardians until he became of age, said the youth long had held hopes the money might be used in charity.

McClintock, who was 21, died last week, but a few months after receiving the money, which had passed on to him at the death of his mother. She died shortly after inheriting it from the boy's father.

Miss Isabelle Pope, fiancee of McClintock, is understood to have been provided for in the will. McClintock died while she waited in the hospital with a license for their marriage.

SHOOTING IN HOME OF VICE CONSUL MYSTERY

Improbable That Girl Killed in American's Apartment Committed Suicide.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—The death of Vice Consul Henry A. Dayton, shot several days ago in Belgrade, was reported today to the State Department.

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Dec. 8.—The shooting of Henry Dayton, American Vice Consul at Belgrade, and the killing of a young woman, Anna Ousoupaitais, at his home, are still a mystery. The police have completed their inquiry and sent their report to the Judge, who has begun an investigation.

An autopsy and careful examination of the scene of the tragedy, according to the police, appear to have established the following facts:

First, Anna Oousoupaitais was struck by a bullet above the temple; the bullet came out at the nape of the neck, ricocheting off the wall. The shot apparently was fired at a certain distance, as the girl's hair was not singed.

Second, blood stains found on the door handles and soap in the bathroom came from the hands of Dayton.

Third, the presence of hairs in the barrel of the revolver that the dead woman held in her hand shows that the weapon was handled after the last shot was fired from it. Blood vessels in Anna's forearms were cut, but not severed, and no blood was found on her hands or sleeves.

The police further affirm that while the position of the wounds in the occipital region of Dayton's head confirm that he was shot from behind, the position of the woman's body and other indications make the theory that she committed suicide highly improbable.

The condition of Dayton is still grave. He recovered consciousness yesterday, and the Judge desired to take his deposition, but postponed this action in deference to the wishes of the American consulate, which feared a serious effect on the wounded man because of his extreme weakness.

'FIXER' BRINGS A CONGRESSMAN INTO TESTIMONY

ANOTHER ST. LOUIS FIRM MENTIONED

Mortimer Tells of Giving Forbes Money for Concern Seeking Veterans' Hospital Contract.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A flood of sensational testimony, involving the names of several Government officials, resulted today from the cross-examination of Elias H. Mortimer, star prosecuting witness in the Government's case against former director Charles R. Forbes of the Veterans' Bureau and John W. Thompson, St. Louis contractor.

Mortimer testified that Congressman Edmonds of Pennsylvania had paid him money to appear before the Bureau of Internal Revenue in behalf of a brewery, and that he had returned half of the money to Edmonds as commissions. He testified that Congressman John Langley of Kentucky had been active in obtaining whisky withdrawal permits, and that Frank Gibbs, secretary to former Attorney-General Daugherty, had aided in efforts to obtain a pardon for a notorious bootlegger.

Mentioned as Lobbyists.

Sidney Bieer, Washington attorney, and A. B. Messer of Chicago were mentioned by Mortimer as lobbyists who received large fees for their services in appearing before executive departments; chiefly before the Bureau of Internal Revenue in liquor and tax cases.

Much of this testimony was unresponsive to counsel's questions but every time Col. James Easby-Smith, Forbes' chief counsel, tapped Mortimer with the rod of cross-examination, a torrent gushed forth.

The witness skipped agilely from one subject to another, roping in widely scattered individuals and personages, and frequently leaving his reference unexplained. The jury seemed bewildered, Easby-Smith was furious and Judge Carpenter labored heavily in his efforts to keep both lawyer and witness to the main track. Easby-Smith frequently showing a disposition to stray in odd directions of his own.

Mortimer said he once gave Congressman Edmonds $1250 for his services in obtaining permits, and that he "had other deals with him."

Another St. Louis Firm.

Another St. Louis firm was involved in the testimony when Mortimer declared that, on Aug. 11 or 12, 1922, he paid Forbes $1000 furnished by the W. M. Sutherland Co. of St. Louis to induce Forbes to award a foundation contract at Tupper Lake, N. Y. Forbes said the $1000 was given him by William McCauley, a Washington representative of the Sutherland company, and that he gave it to Forbes the same day in Forbes' Wardman Park Inn apartment.

"I gave him $550 the next day out of my own pocket of make him feel good and keep him coming along," he added.

"You realize this was a crooked transaction?" asked Easby Smith. "Absolutely, and so did Forbes. He was after all he could get," Mortimer retorted. The witness said McCauley also gave him (Mortimer) $2500 for getting another foundation contract but he did not divide it with Forbes because they had a breakup.

Assumed Names Used.

Easby-Smith, at the outset, asked Mortimer if he had read the transcript of his direct testimony, and if he had any corrections to make. Mortimer said it was correct. Adopting an extremely aggressive attitude, the attorney then asked the witness to repeat his full name.

"Have you ever gone under any other name?" "Never, except since this investigation started. I have sometimes gone under assumed names to keep Forbes and his friends from——"

Easby-Smith interrupted and asked what other names he had used. He drew from Mortimer the fact that he had used the name of Harvey Schroeder and that he had registered under the name of G. J. Allegra, an agent of the Department of Justice. Easby-Smith asked Mortimer if Allegra had been assigned to accompany him

WOMAN DRIVER OF AUTO HELD FOR DEATH OF KARL

WITNESS SAYS SHE SEEMED CONFUSED

Machine That Fatally Injured Smoke Commissioner Did Not Stop After Accident.

A Coroner's jury today held Miss Alvira Korte, 21 years old, of 2852 Keokuk street, for criminal carelessness, following an inquest into the death of Robert H. Karl, 52, of 4244 Arsenal street, Smoke Commissioner for St. Louis, who was fatally injured Friday night, at Grand boulevard and Arsenal street, by an automobile driven by Miss Korte.

Karl was in a group of persons waiting for a westbound Tower Grove street car, when the automobile, owned by Emil G. Rieser, a carpenter, of 5551 Labadie avenue, and operated by Miss Korte, was driven among the waiting persons, striking Karl, who stood on the outer edge of the group.

The automobile did not stop, but was pursued and when overtaken in Tower Grove Park, Rieser was at the wheel. He explained, when placed under arrest with Miss Korte, that he was preparing to drive to a police station to surrender.

"Driver Appeared Confused."

Mrs. K. R. Adams of 3903 Juniata avenue, who was in the group with Karl, testified she saw the automobile, with Miss Korte at the wheel, approaching from the east, across Grand boulevard, at a high rate of speed and that the driver appeared to be confused, which the witness judged from the manner in which the car was being steered.

Karl was struck as the others in the group jumped backward and was knocked about 35 feet, Mrs. Adams testified. The speed of the car moderated for the next 100 feet or so, Mrs. Adams testified, and then was accelerated.

On advice of counsel Miss Korte did not take the witness stand, nor make any statement. She is at liberty on $5000 bond.

Funeral Tomorrow.

Karl died at City Hospital Saturday night from internal injuries. The funeral will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from an undertaking chapel at 4449 Olive street to Valhalla Cemetery.

His duties as smoke commissioner of St. Louis have been taken over by Director of Public Safety Christophel and Robert D. Ridley, boiler and elevator inspector. Christophel today said he would attend to the educational work and Ridley take care of the technical problems involving elimination of the smoke nuisance.

"Smoke Commissioner Karl and I attended a meeting of coal men Thursday, the day before he was fatally injured, held at the Chamber of Commerce to discuss means to abate the smoke nuisance," said Christophel, "and after the meeting I invited him to ride back to the City Hall with me in my automobile.

"He declined, stating that he did not like automobiles for the reason that he had once had a narrow escape from being run down by one. I remarked that riding nowadays was about as safe as walking, and that he might have an accident while walking back. He repeated that he had 'no use for automobiles' and that he made it a point to be very careful, and so he walked back to the city hall."

Christophel said he and Ridley would continue the duties of Karl's office until a capable successor could be found.

The jury's verdict did not hold Rieser in any way responsible for the accident and he was released.

GIRL, 12, SHOOTS HERSELF

Carries Out Threat to End Life if Forced to Go to School.

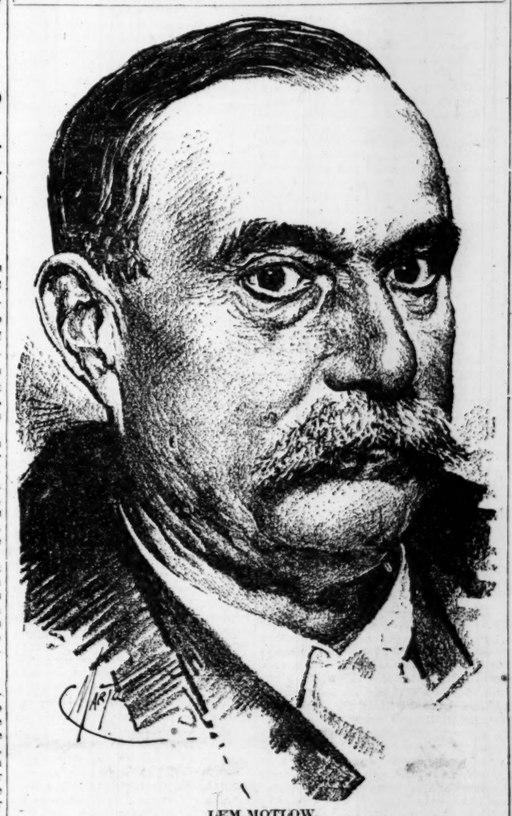

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 8.—"I'll die or kill myself before I graduate. I don't want to go to school," Leona Puckett, 12 years old, told her aunt, Miss Ruby Brewer, today when the latter announced she would take her to school. The aunt had heard Leona make similar expressions before and paid no attention.

A few moments later she heard a shot in an adjoining room. Leona was found dying. She had shot herself through the heart with a pistol taken from her parents' room. The parents were at work.

MOTLOW, ON STAND IN OWN DEFENSE, GIVES HIS VERSION OF THE SLAYING OF PULLIS

Testifies for Himself

LEM MOTLOW.

DENIES HE WAS DRUNK ON DAY OF THE SHOOTING

TELLS OF TROUBLE WITH NEGRO PORTER

Asserts He Was Called a Name and Struck on Cheek When He Asged About Berth.

Lem Motlow, wealthy Tennessee distiller, went on the witness stand this afternoon in his trial for murder, before Judge Hamilton, to give his version of the circumstances under which he shot Clarence T. Pullis, Pullman conductor, on an outbound L. & N. train the night of March 17 last.

Motlow was dressed, as he has been since the trial began last Tuesday, in a black suit and white shirt, with open collar and no necktie. He walked to the stand in agile fashion when one of his lawyers called for him. At that time, the standing room about the walls of the courtroom, as well as the seating space, was filled.

Motlow looked directly at his lawyer, but his first reply was in such low tone that the questioner, Patrick H. Cullen, had to tell him to speak in a louder tone. The story which he proceeded to tell was not a connected narrative of his own, but his replies to a series of questions by Cullen.

Motlow said he was 55 years old, and had lived al his life near Lynchville, Tenn., having been born in the same county where he now lives. He said he had been engaged in agriculture since he had been big enough to plow, and that all the schooling he ever had was a little, when he was 8 or 10 years old.

He said he worked for his father, then hired out at $8 a month, and later went to work for his uncle the late Jack Daniel, a distiller. He said he became manager of his uncle's business.

The state objected to all this biographical detail, but the court permitted the counsel to question Motlow in their own way.

He said he had a wife, four sons and a daughter, the girl being the youngest, 12, and the oldest son being 26. Two sons are in Vanderbilt University, Nashville, and the wife, daughter and eldest son are in court.

Came Here Frequently.

Motlow said he was accustomed to come to St. Louis three or four times a month on business, and that he came here March 17 last. He told of his day's movement, including a visit to a sick friend in St. John's Hospital, and of a dinner from 7 to 8:45 p. m. in a market street restaurant, the location of which he did not fix exactly.

"Any liquor served there?" Cullen asked.

"Yes," the witness said, "whisky was served in teacups. I had two drinks. The cups were pretty well filled," but, in reply to another question, he said, "No, I was not drunk."

He told of going to the station with two friends, and how one, Al Mann, accompanied him to gate 27-28, where he entered, his train being on track 21. He was asked again, "Were you drunk?" and he said, "No(but I felt that I had some whisky."

He said he did not go near the haberdashery in the station midway. This is in contradiction of the testimony of a previous witness, the Rev. Clinton Cromwell, a passenger on the train.

Had Phoned Pullman Office.

Motlow related that he had phoned the Pullman office and ordered a ticket reserved for him on the Nashville train. It was his invariable custom, he explained, to pay his railroad fare from a mileage book, and buy his Pullman, Belleville to Nashville, after boarding the train.

At the train he spoke to Conductor Pullis, telling him he had re-

ADVOCATES OF DAWES PLAN WIN GERMAN ELECTION

COMMUNISTS LOSE EIGHTEEN PLACES

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Strong gains by the Social-Democrats with consequent strengthening of the section favoring adherence to the Dawes program of reparations, together with the losses for both the extreme Right and Left, are features of the returns from yesterday's Reichstag election.

Provisionally final results, compiled shortly after noon today gave the Social Democrats 129 seats, a gain of 29 as compared with last May's election. The Centrists (Clericals) and the German Democratic party, the other two liberal parties represented in the Government, not only held their own but each increased its representation—the Centrists by two seats and the Democrats by three.

The standing was: Social Democrats, 129 seats; German Nationalists, 104; Centrists (Clericals), 67; German People's party, 50; Communists, 44; German-Democrats, 31; Bavarian People's party, 19; Extreme Nationalists, 14; Economic party, 10; Farmers' party, 4; Hanoverians, 4; other parties, 8. The Bavarian People's party added three members to its strength, the German Nationalists two and Stresemann's German People's party six.

Ludendorff's Party Wiped Out.

The Communists and extreme Nationalists lost 18 each and General Ludendorff's Chauvinistic anti-Semetic party was practically wiped out.

The Socialists, who will enter the new Reichstag as the biggest party, made their gains chiefly at the expense of the Communists, while the German Nationalists appear to have picked up the defections from Ludendorff's party.

Among the notables re-elected were Chancellor Marx and former Chancellors Scheidmann, Mueller, Bauer, Fehrenbach, Wirth and Stresemann.

The German Nationalists re-elected Admiral Von Tirpitz, Prince Otto Von Bismarck, Count Westarp and Oscar Hergt, while Albrecht Von Graef and Count Von Reventlow, together with Ludendorff himself, survived the collapse of Ludendorff's party.

Count Bernstorff, former Ambassador to the United States, and Dr. Bernhardt Dernburg were re-elected on the Democratic ticket.

Among the women returned were Ruth Fischer, Communist; Gertrude Beaumer and Dr. Marie Elizabeth Luueders, Democrats, and Frau Margarethe Behm, German Nationalist.

Dr. Rudolf Hilferding, former Minister of Finance, and Otto Wels, Socialist party chairman, also were returned.

Others Re-elected.

Others re-elected were Adam Stegerwald, head of the Christian Trade Unions and former Prussian Premier; Dr. Anton Hoeflex, the Minister of Posts; Max Wallraf, President of the Reichstag; former Minister of the Interior Koch; Prof. Walter Schuecking, who was one of Germany's peace delegates at Versailles; Count Hugo Lerschenfeld-Koefering, former Bavarian Premier, and the Prussian Minister of the Interior, Herr Severing.

The outcome of the general elections leaves the parliamentary situation wholly unclarified, as the new party line-up in the Reichstag precludes the formation of a three-party coalition composed of the Socialists, the Clericals and the Democrats, in the opinion of political leaders.

According to the latest returns, these three parties have elected a total of 227 members of the Reichstag, and, with only this number to depend upon, the leaders fear this liberal combination would be unable to command a dependable majority, even if it were given the support of the Bavarian People's party, with its 19 votes.

Four-Party Coalition.

The other alternative suggested by the increased number of deputies, due to the unexpectedly heavy vote is that of a four-party coalition, taking in the Socialists, the Clericals, the Democrats and the Stresemann People's party. The component units of this combination would represent political elements of contrasts, however, and it could only maintain a parliamentary existence, it is pointed out, if the parties composing it subscribed to a political truce.

To this extent the leaders of the liberal parties are inclined to view yesterday's election as a "dead heat" and anything but a hopeful advance in the direction of forming a Government which would rest on a broad center base and command a majority of sufficient size to give it an era of unhampered parliamentary action.

The fuller returns received during the morning from the provincial voting centers showed heavy balloting which is expected to bring the total to nearly 1,500,000 votes in excess of that at the May elections.

Provisional final figures for the elections to the Prussian Diet, which were held yesterday simultaneously with the Reichstag elections, show: Social Democrats, 116, against 136 in the old Diet, including 28 Independent Socialists; German Nationalists, 111, against 77 in the old Diet; Catholic Center Party, 79, unchanged; Communists, 47, against 29; German People's Party, 50, against 57; Extreme Nationalists 12 (party previously unrepresented); German Democrats, 24, unchanged; Economic Party, 10, against 4; Hanover, 5, against 3; Polish Party 1.

DR. JORDAN'S EDUCATIONAL PEACE PLAN WINS $25,000

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 8.—Dr. David Starr Jordan, chancellor emeritus of Leland Stanford University, educator, naturalist and author, has been awarded the price of $25,000 offered by Raphael Herman of Washington, D. C., for the best educational plan calculated to maintain world peace. Announcement of the award was made here today by Dr. Augustus O. Thomas Commissioner of Education for Maine and president of the World Federation of Education Associations, which directed the contests. Thousands of plans were submitted for the consideration of the judges.

The World Federation of Education was organized as an outgrowth of the world conference on education, which met at San Francisco in 1923. The award, Dr. Thomas explained, differs from that offered by Edward Bok in that it calls for no legislative action and will not be submitted to referendum vote. The plan selected, it was stipulated, must be world-wide and capable of application in all schools.

Dr. Jordan in his plan recommends that "the World Federation make intensive studies of certain matters pertinent to world amity through the continuous operation of appropriate committees on education for peace, these to report at stated meetings of the federation and to the various national organizations, corresponding to and including our own National Education association, indicating at the same time lines of action likely to contribute toward international concord. Meanwhile, one must admit that any specified procedure can be at best only a step toward the development of enlightened public opinion and co-operation in effecting mutual understanding among peoples."

Dr. Jordan's Suggestions.

Indicating "certain lines of hopeful activity with the scope of the world federation, Dr. Jordan suggested the formation of a number of committees as follows:

"The formation of a general world committee on education for peace, to function in connection with the several educational groups in the different nations, and a second international committee to co-operate with many already established organizations for peace in all parts of the world.

"A committee to investigate the present teaching of history the world over, reporting also on text books used, their virtues and their delinquencies from the standpoint of international amity and stressing the need that history, whether elementary or advanced, should be just and true so far as it goes. Above all, history should not be perverted in the supposed interest of national 'honor' or partisanship.

"A committee on the teaching of patriotism which shall attempt to define its true nature, expressing its value, its limitations and its perversions.

Mutual Understanding.

"A committee to consider plans of promoting mutual international understanding on the part of students of various ages.

"A committee to consider the possibilities of better relations through the international use of athletic sports, especially those games which involve co-operative action or team play as distinguished from individual competition.

"A committee to consider the possibility of a continuous effort to commit the visible influence of the Government of the United States to definite activity in behalf of peace by means of a bureau of conciliation in the Department of State or a peace council connected with the same department.

"A committee to consider without prejudice the question of military training in school and college, its possible advantages to the individual and the nation, with the alleged accompanying drawbacks and dangers.

Preparedness and War.

"A committee to consider 'preparedness' in regard to the educational, economic and social aspects. Even admitting that a large and well equipped military force (land, water or air) will make for victory in case of an attack by jealous neighbors or other imaginary enemies, to what extent does it also invite war?

"A committee to consider standing incentives to war and the possibility of their abating through legislation, the influence of public opinion, or otherwise.

"A general study, through a committee and through individual investigation, of the current arguments for war as a cosmic necessity.

"A committee to study The Hague court of arbitration, also the present permanent Court of International Justice, and the relation of these two activities to world education.

"A committee to consider the League of Nations and the problems involved in our acceptance or adhesion to that organization, with special reference to its bearings on international education."

ST. LOUIS FIFTH IN POSTAL RECEIPTS FOR NOVEMBER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — St. Louis ranked fifth and Kansas City sixth in a table of postal receipts for November issued today by the Postoffice Department. New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston exceeded the two Missouri cities. The St. Louis total was $1,037,082.

A slight decrease from the figures for November, 1923, was attributed to the fact that five Sundays and election day fell within November this year.

12 Prisoners Marched 20 Miles.

By the Associated Press.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Dec. 8.—Twelve men, captured in Agua Prieta in a roundup of alleged revolutionists and marched to Naco, 20 miles distant, from which point they will be sent today by train to Nogales for trial, reached Naco yesterday afternoon. The prisoners, bound hand-to-hand and ankle-to-ankle, to prevent any attempt to escape, withstood the hardships of the desert march stoically.

More Mill Workers' Wages Cut.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. 8.—A wage reduction of 10 per cent, effective next Monday, was announced today by the Everett Mills. Normally the Everett Mills employ 1800 persons. During the last year the plant has worked about 45 per cent of capacity.

SLAYER DENIED REPRIEVE, GENERAL STRIKE IS CALLED

HULL, England, Dec. 8.—A general strike has been called for noon today in an effort to stop the hanging of William George Smith, 26 years old, painter, for the murder of a married woman.

His execution has been fixed for Tuesday and Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks refused to grant a reprieve. When news of the refusal reached Hull a meeting of leading citizens was called and wired the Home Secretary that "the city is dumfounded by your decision." It was voted to send telegrams to the King and Joynson-Hicks constantly until the execution or until a reprieve is granted.

Ten thousand persons met in a field in protest and prayer with the mother of the condemned man. Another crowd of 7000, headed by a band, marched to the prison, which was guarded by police, and sang hymns. Cries of "We'll hang the hangman" and "Pull the prison down" were heard.

Feeling for Smith is prompted by his comparative youth and the belief that the woman he killed, without premeditation, was to blame for the intrigue. She was older than Smith.

TRAIN ROUNDS CURVE; MAN ON PLATFORM THROWN TO DEATH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Albert de Silver, lawyer and director of the American Civil Liberties Union, was thrown from an express train of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad as it rounded a curve at Rye, N. Y., yesterday and was killed.

Mr. de Silver, with his wife and son, boarded the train at Grand Central Terminal to go to New Haven. Just before the train reached Rye he started forward to the smoking car. As he was crossing the open platform between two cars the train took a curve at high speed. There was a sudden jerk and De Silver was thrown from the platform to the adjoining track. De Silver fell from the train in front of Rye station.

No one on the train noticed his fall, and his wife and son rode on to New Haven in the belief that he was in the smoking car. It was only when they arrived there and he did not appear that they learned of the accident.

CHINESE SLAIN, ANOTHER IS SHOT, IN TONG WAR HERE

Killing of Lem Geow by Gunman Episode of Similar Killings in East, Police Believe.

The murder of Lem Geow by a Chinese gunman, as he walked on the main street of St. Louis' Chinatown at dusk yesterday, is an episode, the police believe, in the tong war which has raged in New York and other Eastern cities for several weeks.

At the hour when Lem Geow was shot in front of 18 South Eighth street, 4:30 p. m., the neighborhood was being patrolled by detectives and policemen on information that the war of the On Leongs and Hip Sings, rival Chinese tongs, was about to break forth in St. Louis.

In the alley behind No. 18, Detective Sergeant Harry Dougherty heard three shots and ran through Long Gee's store at that address. As he reached the front door, Lem Geow staggered in and fell dead at his feet, a bullet wound in the heart.

In the rooms over the store, preparations were under way for the christening of Long Gee's infant son to which about 60 guests, the leading Chinese of the city, had been invited. Lem Geow had not been invited, but some of the arriving guests saw him fall.

Revolver Found in Gutter.

The murderer had kneeled in the gutter before 22 S. Eighth street, carefully aimed at his victim and fired three shots, the police were told. Then he dropped the weapon in the gutter and fled west through "Hop Alley." The revolver, with three discharged cartridges, was found in the gutter, and Lee Doe, 71 years old, of 710 Market street, who was shot in the back, declared he was injured by a bullet meant for Lem Geow.

In the investigation which followed, the police learned that Lem Geow was 65 years old, a laundryman at 920 North Jefferson avenue. They arrested 30 Chinese, who were questioned at Police Headquarters. Four of them, now at liberty under bond, charged with homicide, were arrested at 719 Walnut street, where Charlie Joe, a laundryman of 4972 Fountain avenue, was found with an unloaded revolver in his hand. Joe said he was president of the Lung-Kong-Kung-Saw Association and was about to call a meeting when he heard shots and hurriedly got his revolver.

Lee Doe, the wounded man, apparently knew little of the murder. He did not know Lem Geow nor does he belong to any tong, he said.

Few Tong Members Here.

The On Leong Tong has existed in St. Louis many years as a Chinese business men's association. According to those acquainted with the activities of the 500 Chinese in St. Louis, the Hip Sing Tong has but a few members here, its activity being confined largely to the Eastern cities. Chinese business men asserted that Lem Geow was not a member of the On Leong Tong, but it could not be established that he belonged to the rival faction.

The tong war in the East, which has been ascribed to business rivalry between the Hip Sings and the On Leongs, was at its height about six weeks ago when Joe Lin, a member of the St. Louis On Leong Tong, and "Mayor of Chinatown," conferred with Chief of Police O'Brien. O'Brien said today that Joe Lin expressed fear that the war might be brought to St. Louis and for that reason the Chinese quarter was being watched with especial care.

View of One Chinese.

One Chinese said today that the murder might be a tong affair. He was John Young, an interpreter occasionally employed by Director of Immigration James T. H. Nash. He told Chief O'Brien that Lem Geow had lived in St. Louis several years, refusing to join the On Leong Tong and for that reason, he said, there might have been enmity.

Inspector Nash began an investigation today. He doesn't think Chinese here have begun a tong war, because he has the pledges of the Chinese leaders that they will not engage in such a dispute.

'Fixer' Heard His Wife Telephone "Her Bobbie"

constantly since last April. "Yes, because Forbes had several men following me," was the reply.

In answer to another question, Mortimer said two men who had followed him on a train were put to flight by Allegra at the Manhattan Terminal, New York.

"Were they gunmen?" the lawyer asked. "Judging by the fact that Forbes hired them, I supposed they were," Mortimer retorted.

Brings in Mrs. Mortimer.

"Ever go under any other assumed names?" the attorney continued. "Yes, I went under the name of Martin—the same name that Mrs. Mortimer had when she met Forbes at hotels."

"What hotels did Mrs. Mortimer meet Col. Forbes at under the name of Martin?" Easby-Smith demanded. The answer came readily. "At the Plaza and the Ritz-Carlton, in New York, and the Rittenhouse, in Philadelphia."

Easby-Smith asked that the testimony be stricken out, but the Judge held that it would stay in the record.

"I heard Forbes advise her to use the name of Martin. When she called her 'Bobbie' up at his apartment I was fortunate enough to get in on the line," Mortimer threw out.

"I also found out that Mrs. Mortimer, on the advice of Forbes, was running up bills as large as possible on me just before she left me."

New York Apartment.

Easby-Smith then began to question Mortimer about the various places he had lived under the name of Schfoeder, and got him to admit that he paid the rent on a New York apartment where "a Mrs. Schroeder" lived.

"You're making that pretty strong, Col. Smith," admonished Mortimer angrily. "There were three people living there. I had my own apartment."

Here the court interrupted to say: "I don't see what this has to do with this case. You are building up an unfortunate atmosphere around the name of a woman who isn't here and I won't permit it?"

Easby Smith pointed out that he had not mentioned the woman's first name but the court told him to get off the subject.

The attorney asked Mortimer if it had not been his custom when testifying "to interject calumny against the name of your wife?" "You and Forbes brought her name in—I didn't," was the answer.

When He Got $33,333.

Mortimer testified he had been a special agent of the Department of Justice since last April, drawing $11 a day and transportation. He said part of his work had been in connection with the Veterans' Bureau.

Pursuing an inquiry into Mortimer's earlier occupations, Easby Smith asked him if he never got $100,000 for getting 4000 cases of whisky out of a bonded warehouse."

"Was that a legal transaction?" "It was so far as I was concerned."

"How did you get the whisky withdrawn?" "I arranged it with the Bureau of Internal Revenue through Congressman Langley."

Congressman John Langley of Kentucky is now under conviction for conspiring to aid in the illegal withdrawal of liquor, and Mortimer was a witness against him. It was not this transaction, however.

Mrs. Votaw's Name Again.

Mortimer was asked about sales of supplies which he had made to the Public Health Service.

"It was in that connection that you met Mrs. Votaw?" he was asked, referring to Mrs. Carolyn Votaw, sister of the late President Harding and wife of the superintendent of Federal prisons, whose name had been linked with Forbes in previous testimony.

Judge Carpenter intervened. "Mrs. Votaw's name was brought into this case merely for the purpose of identifying a name in a letter," he declared. "The Government specifically disclaimed any intention to reflect on her.

"I think the reference went much deeper than that but the defense has no intention of bringing calumnuy against her." Easby-Smith said. "Then please make that perfectly plain to the jury and the press," admonished the court.

Rising Sun Brewery Case.

"You also presented some matters to the Treasury Department, didn't you?" the lawyer went on. Mortimer said he had.

"Ever have a case for the Sunshine Brewery?" Mortimer said he had done some work for the Rising Sun Brewery.

"I did that work with Mr. A. B. Messer of Chicago," he said. "That was one of the cases Congressman Edmonds of Philadelphia was mixed up in."

"What was your share in it?" Easby-Smith inquired. "All I did was to collect $2500 and give Congressman Edmonds half of it," the witness answered. "Messer did the work before the Treasury Department."

"But what did you do for your money?" counsel insisted. "I tell you all I did was to collect the money from Congressman Edmonds and give $1250 of it back to him," Mortimer replied.

"Congressman Edmonds was representing the Rising Sun people and he wanted Messer and me to represent them in Washington. He gave me the money. I returned half of it to him, and Messer looked after the case before the Treasury Department."

Judge Interrenes.

Again the court intervened. "This inquiry is going past all reasonable bounds," he said. "I do not propose to have the names of a lot of people dragged in here and covered with dirt when they have no connection with this case. References to Congressman Edmonds will be stricken out."

But the admonition was not sufficient.

"Did you ever return any money collected by you?" Easby-Smith asked. "Yes, I turned back $2500 once. That was another one of Congressman Edmonds' deals. He was mixed in several of them that we had before the Bureau of Internal Revenue."

"Were you ever associated with Sidney Bieber of Washington in any matters before the departments there?" "I was."

"Bieber got $5000 in Philadelphia for getting some liquor withdrawal permits and kept all of it. He was supposed to do the dividing. He went away with $15,000 in the Vincent pardon case, too."

Mortimer was shifting from one subject to another rapidly and sketchily. Easby-Smith was trying to stem the flood which every question unloosed but with no success. Government prosecutors were chuckling over their opponents' dilemma.

The latest reference was to the case of Charles Vincenti, notorious bootlegger convicted in Baltimore, who served 18 months' imprisonment after amazing efforts were made to obtain a pardon for him. Much of this came out before the Senate Wheeler Committee in the Daugherty investigation last year.

"You got a note for $50,000 from Vincenti yourself, didn't you?" Easby-Smith asked. "Yes, and Forbes and Mrs. Mortimer got that," flashed back from the witness stand. "Bieber tried to get that, too. We were to get $300,000 if we obtained a pardon for Vincenti. Messer made a proposition to Frank Gibbs, Daugherty's secretary, and Gibbs went to Daugherty. Daugherty said that there was no new evidence in the case, and the man would have to go to jail."

Easby-Smith started to ask Mortimer if he had made a statement last winter to Frank Vanderlip, former banker, who undertook to drive corruption out of the Government, concerning Gibbs, but again the Judge intervened and warned counsel and witness to confine their questions and answers to persons connected with the case.

"Mixed Up in Supreme Court."

Mortimer remarked that "Gibbs had a friend mixed up in the Supreme Court and managed to get his case put off for several months," but was not permitted to go into that. Gibbs is now in the Treasury Department.

By a forcible assertion of authority, Judge Carpenter finally managed to herd counsel and witnesses back to the Forbes-Thompson case. But every time Easby Smith asked one question, Mortimer continued to answer three or four that were not asked.

OPEN VERDICT IN 'B. NESS' CASE

An open verdict was returned by a Coroner's jury today in the case of a man who registered at the St. Clair Hotel, Third and Missouri avenues, East St. Louis, Friday night, as "B. Ness, city," and was found shot to death in his room Saturday morning.

The body, with a bullet wound in the head above the right ear, was found on the floor between the bed and a wall and underneath it was a revolver with one discharged cartridge. Deputy Coroner Green said indications pointed to suicide, but an open verdict was returned to permit police to continue their investigation.

NEW TRIAL DENIED TO HARRY A. HENKE

A new trial was refused for Harry A. Henke Jr., who is in Clayton jail facing a 20-year prison term for the murder of his wife, Julia, in their Richmond Heights home, July 11, by Circuit Judge Moffitt, sitting at Clayton today, ruling on a motion argued Oct. 24 last.

The Court's decision leaves Henke but one avenue, an appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court. It was told of the ruling Henke said he would instruct his attorney to arrange for the appeal. He showed little emotion and expressed doubt as to whether he had enough money to finance he had enough money.

Special Prosecutor Robert Hamsel, who acted for the State in Henke's trial in September, said today he would ask Judge Moffitt hinney to pass sentence immediately and order Henke's committal to the State penitentiary. Any effort to bring about his release on bond pending an appeal would be fought, Roessel said.

Mrs. Henke was beaten to death with a heavy iron wrench and the conviction of her husband was based on a chain of circumstantial evidence. In arguing their motion for a new trial, the defense attorneys cited 65 points on which they contended the conviction was faulty.

ITALIAN FEUDIST SHOT TO DEATH BY AN ASSASSIN

Two Witnesses See Sam Vitale Knocked Down and Murdered in Lot at 1124 North Eighth Street

FIVE SHOTS FIRED INTO VICTIM'S HEAD

John Buselaki Arrested and Identified as Slayer—Believed to Be Sequel to Shooting Last March.

An assassin's bullets, fired at close range in daylight, but observed by two witnesses, ended the career yesterday afternoon of Sam Vitale, an Italian feudist, who was awaiting trial for the murder of another Italian.

Vitale, 27 years old, who lived with his wife and 4-year-old daughter at 1234 North Fourteenth street, was waylaid as he drove his express truck onto the vacant lot adjoining his employer's home, at 1124 North Eighth street. As he dismounted, the assassin appeared and called to him. Words followed, then a blow, and Vitale was knocked to the ground. The slayer drew a pistol and fired five shots into the victim's head. Then, pushing the weapon into his waistband, the slayer ran north in the alley and disappeared into Carr street.

Two Witnesses to the Murder.

This account of the murder was furnished the police by Helen Peterson, 15 years old, who was across the alley in the rear yard of her home, at 1125 North Seventh street, talking to a negro girl neighbor, and by Adolph Rockeymore, 44, a negro, who was standing in the rear door of his home, at 1127 North Seventh street. Both saw the shooting and obtained a first-hand description of the slayer, as he ran past them a few feet away.

Upon this description, police went to the gasoline filling station operated by Joe and John Buselaki, brothers, of 904 Carr street, at Sixth and Wash streets, and arrested John, when he appeared. He carried a loaded automatic pistol in his left waistband. Taken to the Carr Street Station and confronted by the girl and negro, he was identified as the slayer. He protested ignorance of the killing.

John Buselaki Held in Case.

A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of homicide, holding Buselaki to the grand jury, at the inquest today. The girl positively identified him as the slayer, and the negro pointed him out as the man who looked "exactly like" the slayer and was wearing the "same coat." Police testified to finding the body and of arresting, on description, Buselaki, whom they characterized as "an associate of gangsters and a mob of blackhanders."

Joe Buselaki took the stand and endeavored to set up an alibi for his brother, who, he said, was constantly in his company from 10 o'clock in the morning, until arrested. He said he kept John with him as a "guard," and related that he never went out alone without first arming his brother and having him along. John Buselaki refused to make a statement.

In their search for a motive for the slaying, the police were unable to attribute the crime as a sequel to the shooting by Vitale May 8, 1923, of Louis Valenti, his cousin, or to a subsequent bootlegging feud.

Another Similar Killing.

Valenti was shot and killed as he sat in a curtained automobile at Fourteenth street and Cass avenue by one of two assassins, who escaped. Vitale and his brother, Cicoro, were sought, and arrested almost a year later in Grand Rapids, Mich. They were brought back, detectives smuggling them into St. Louis from the East Side, to prevent possible assassination.

Sam Vitale confessed, taking the blame and declaring Valenti had come to the Vitale home and attempted to kill Cicoro. He related that Valenti had brought his brother to America and that the brother repaid $600 advanced to make the trip. Nevertheless, he said, Valenti threw the brother out of the house and said he was going to kill him. Peter Cipriano, Valenti's uncle, told a different story. He said Cicoro refused to work or to repay the loan and Valenti finally threw the cousin out.

One of Buselaki Brothers Shot.

Joe Buselaki, brother of the prisoner, was shot twice by two assailants, March 3, last, as he was walking along Carr street, across from his home, which is only a few doors from the Carr Street Police Station. Sergt. Peter McGauley, who was standing at the corner, pursued the assassins and shot and captured one of them, wounding him slightly. Buselaki, who was shot in the shoulder and abdomen, ran into the police station and collapsed. He told Capt. Stinger, then in charge of the district, that he feared assassination and had built an armor-plate defense, four feet high, around his gasoline filling station.

NEW TRIAL DENIED TO HARRY A. HENKE JR.

A new trial was refused for Harry A. Henke Jr., who is in Clayton jail facing a 20-year prison term for the murder of his wife, Marie, in their Richmond Heights home, July 11, by Circuit Judge McElhinney at Clayton today, ruling on a motion argued Oct. 26 last.

The Court's decision leaves Henke but one avenue, an appeal to the Missouri Supreme Court. When told of the ruling Henke said he would instruct his attorney to arrange for the appeal. He showed little emotion and expressed doubt as to whether he had enough money to finance he had enough money.

He said Cicoro refused to work or to repay the loan and Valenti finally threw the cousin out.

One of Buselaki Brothers Shot.

Joe Buselaki, brother of the prisoner, was shot twice by two assailants, March 3, last, as he was walking along Carr street, across from his home, which is only a few doors from the Carr Street Police Station. Sergt. Peter McGauley, who was standing at the corner, pursued the assassins and shot and captured one of them, wounding him slightly. Buselaki, who was shot in the shoulder and abdomen, ran into the police station and collapsed. He told Capt. Stinger, then in charge of the district, that he feared assassination and had built an armor-plate defense, four feet high, around his gasoline filling station.

LOYAL RUSSIANS CALL ON GRAND DUCHESS

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia says New York is a superlative place.

"You Americans do things up in a most extraordinary way," she said yesterday. "There is nothing in the world like the Broadway lights. And your traffic police are perfectly amazing. Those motorcycle men who have been accompanying me do the most extraordinary things. I am in love with your police."

Detectives are still guarding her and Capt. Edward Frye is in charge of half a dozen uniformed police outside the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel with half a dozen plain clothes men inside, but no one has attempted to disturb her. But for the motor-cycle squad which escorted her to tea yesterday afternoon at Colonial Club and again in the evening to the dinner and reception of the Colonial Dames of America, she would have passed unnoticed.

The Grand Duchess is being entertained in accordance with a schedule arranged by the Monday Opera Club, which is her host in America and which provides society its only opportunities to meet her socially.

Her visitors between social functions are principally loyal Russians, many of them former officers under the late Czar, whom the Grand Duke Cyril hopes to succeed. The chief function in the round of entertainment will be at 10 o'clock tonight when the Monday Opera Club will give a reception at Sherry's. The club members and their guests number 500.

Dispatches from Washington last night said her day and a half there will be crowded. No official notice, however, will be taken of the presence of the Grand Duchess by the White House or State Department.

CHLOROFORMED HER CHILDREN

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Rosemary Sparkman, 28 years old, who, on Saturday night, chloroformed her two children, aged 9 and 7, and then ended her own life by inhaling gas, is declared by her husband to be a cousin of the late Lord Carnarvon of England, discoverer of the tomb of Tutankhamen, in Egypt.

The bodies of Mrs. Sparkman and her two children were discovered last night. Sparkman, a University of Utah professor of modern languages, was away from Salt Lake on business. A note left by the dead woman read: "Lay me away quietly. No friends. I had no friends in life, nor was I granted them in death. Let me be alone."

DEFENSE TRIES TO SHOW PORTER ASSAILED MOTLOW

served lower 3 in car 49. He had never seen Pullis before, he said.

"Pullis said he was sorry, but lower 3 was taken," Motlow continued. "He offered lower 3 in car L-21, which was all right with me. Then I went to the car door, where I met the porter."

At this point, Motlow was asked if he was dressed as he was today. He replied, "Yes, I wore a faded colored shirt without a tie —and a dark slouch hat."

"The porter asked to see my ticket," he went on, "'I haven't any ticket,' I answered, 'I ride on mileage.' 'You can't get on this train without a ticket?' the porter said, and I went back to the conductor. He told the porter to let me on.

"The porter pushed me and said, 'You old ——— ———, didn't I tell you you couldn't go to bed without a ticket.' I started to say something and he struck me on my right cheek with his left hand. I fell back and my head struck a window sill, nearly knocking my senses out.

Says Negro Choked Him.

"I got up and the dargy grabbed me by the throat andsqueezed my neck. I was almost dead, I thought. I reached for my pistol —then somebody grabbed my hand from behind, and the pistol was accidentally discharged twice.

"Do you remember pulling the trigger?" asked Attorney Cullen.

"No, I don't," replied the witness.

The most important testimony of the day, before Motlow's appearance on the stand, was given by Dr. W. F. McNary, of the surgical staff of St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, who said that Pullis, after the shooting, said to him:

"A passenger shot me. The porter and the passenger were struggling. The porter ha a stick. I grabbed the porter by his right arm, and in the altercation I was shot."

Surgeon for Railroad.

The State, cross-examining Dr. McNary, brought out that he was local surgeon for the L. & N. railroad. The State has taken the position that the railroad is trying to shield Motlow, a shipper, in this case. Dr. McNary was asked numerous questions as to why he had not told this story before, and particularly why he had not told of the alleged conversation to a representative of the Pullman Co., named Snoddy, who saw him in the course of an investigation of the case. His reply was, in most cases, that he did not give the details because he was not asked for them. He was asked whether Snoddy did not make a special request for all the information he had, and said he did not recall such a request.

"Isn't it a fact," Dr. McNary was asked by the State, "that Pullis said a drunken passenger shot him, when he tried to make the man sit down?" The surgeon denied this.

The surgeon said his reason for not questioning Pullis more at length was that Pullis was very weak. He said he told Pullis that his wound appeared to be fatal, and that Pullis said he thought so too.

B. & O. Employe Testifies.

W. E. Bostwick, a B. & O. employe, testified that he rode across the bridge on the L. & N. train on the night in question, and that he was with the train conductor, A. J. Silliman, and the negro porter, Ed Wallis, in the smoking compartment, where Pullis lay before he was taken from the train at East St. Louis. When asked what Pullis said there, he said:

"He said, 'There was a scuffle, and I stepped in and caught the bullet.'"

Bostwick, it developed, was the witness mentioned previously by Silliman as being present, but whose name Silliman did not know.

Edward Colleran, night station agent at Relay Depot, East St. Louis, testified that he talked to Wallis, the porter, and that Wallis said there was trouble between him and a passenger, and that he (Wallis) went out and brought the conductor in. He said he asked him further how the shooting occurred, and that Wallis made another statement to him and a policeman. He was not asked to repeat that statement, and the defense appears to be reserving it.

In cross-examination, Colleran said he entered the sleeper where the shooting occurred, by the front door. Conductor Silliman has testified that he found that door locked.

Gateman's Testimony.

James O'Hearn, a Union Station gateman, testified that he saw Motlow enter the station midway, at Eighteenth street, with a friend, and that he walked directly to gate 27 and entered there, though his train was on track 21. This seems to be meant to contradict a part of the testimony of the Rev. Clinton Cromwell, a passenger, who said he saw Motlow by the haberdashery store in the midway, and that Motlow went in at gate 21.

At the afternoon session two men testified that they were with Motlow at dinner the night of the shooting, and that he was not intoxicated.

Dined at Restaurant.

Daniel Heffernan of 1835 Cass avenue, a Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, testified that Motlow, Albert Mann, Perry Parker, Thomas Heffernan and he were at dinner in a restaurant on Market street from 7 p. m. until nearly 8:45.

Asked the direct question, "Was Motlow drunk when you left him?" he replied, "He was not drunk."

In cross-examination, Heffernan testified that his duties as Deputy Collector necessitated his handling of papers in connection with the withdrawal of whisky from bonded warehouses. Motlow is under indictment for an alleged part in the surreptitious removal of more than 800 barrels of whisky from the Jack Daniel warehouse.

Albert Mann of University City, general agent of the L. & N. here, said he had known Motlow about 12 years. He left the restaurant about 8:40 p. m., he said, with Motlow and Parker, riding in the latter's automobile to Union Station. Motlow walked down the Eighteenth street stairway and diagonally across to Track 28, where he began talking to O'Hearn.

Denies Motlow Was Drunk.

"I bade him good-by and patted him on the back as he went through the gate," said Mann. To the question, "Was he drunk?" Mann replied, "No."

E. W. Powell, a Federal official of Birmingham, Ala., appeared as a character witness for Motlow. He was followed by S. J. Hess of East St. Louis, a service man for the L. & N., who testified that he saw Motlow in the East St. Louis police station the day after the shooting, and that there was a black and blue mark on his right cheek, also marks on his neck. He said the Pullman representative, Snoddy, was present.

Fred Moler, connected with the L. & N. special service, said he saw Motlow at the police station, and that his face was flushed, and his cheek bore a mark.

The eposition given by Wallis in his civil suit for $50,000 damages against Motlow was then brought into the testimony. Two points in which the deefnse contends that Wallis has contradicted the deposition, in his testimony at the trial, are that the deposition indicates that he had his rod, used for closing the ventilators, in his hand whes the trouble with Motlow began; and that he said in the deposition that the Rev. Mr. Cromwell, a passenger, was in the aisle, while Cromwell has said he remained in his berth.

The testimony of Dr. McNary, Bostwick, Colleran and O'Hearn followed the successful attempt of the defense for admission of the testimony of Train Conductor Silliman, as to Pullis' statement while he lay wounded in the car. After an argument, in which the State's lawyers objected to the introduction of the matter, Silliman was permitted to answer this question

"Did you hear Pullis say, while he lay wounded in the smoking compartment, that there had been trouble between a passenger and the porter, and that he stepped in and caught the bullet?"

"Yes," the witness said.

Use of Statement.

The statements of Dr. McNary and Silliman will be used by the defense in its endeavor to scale down the offense from first-degree murder, as charged in the indictment, to second-degree murder or manslaughter, with a view also to the possibility of an acquittal.

By making it appear that Motlow was shooting at the porter, not at the Pullman conductor, the defense counsel hopes to lower the degree of his culpability in fatally wounding the conductor. Testimon to the effect that the porter attacked Motlow is intended to complete a mixed plea of self-defense and accident.

In the argument over admission of the matter, Patrick H. Cullen, head of the defense group of seven lawyers, said it was a spontaneous statement, made soon after the "accident." Assistant Circuit Attorney Johnston, arguing against the admission, said that only an exclamation made at the moment of the shooting would be admissible. Between the time of the shooting and the statement to which Silliman testified, the train had passed through the tunnel, over Eads Bridge and to Relay Depot, East St. Louis.

Court's Ruling.

Judge Hamilton said he admitted the statement as tending to impeach the previous testimony of the negro porter, Ed Wallis, that he had heard no statement of the sort made by Pullis. The train conductor said that, when Pullis made the statement, the porter and another man (Bostwick) were present.

The Judge did not pass on the question whether the matter could be admitted as part of the res gestae, or direct evidence in the case, but the defense achieved its main point in getting the matter before the jury. The defense asked that Wallis be recalled for further cross-examination, but Judge Hamilton denied this request.

After Train Conductor Silliman had made the desired statement as to what Pullis said, the State cross-examined him, asking whether he had not been instructed by officials of the L. & N. to keep out of the way of the grand jury and the prosecuting authorities, both here and in East St. Louis, but he denied this. He was asked where he was when the Pullis inquest was held in East St. Louis, and said he was in Indiana that day. He did not remember where he had been at the time when the grand jury here was hearing testimony in the case.

The train conductor said, in his cross-examination, that when he first asked Motlow if he did the shooting, Motlow replied "No," and said further that he had no "gun." He then made a hurried search, and found no weapon. He was asked further about taking Motlow into the sleeping car ahead, and said three or four men were there. He could not say whether Joseph Broida, a passenger whose testimony the defense is trying to impeach, was one of these.

He was asked whether he heard Pullis say, "I'm suffering—do you think I'll live?" He said he did not hear this. Al Davis, porter of the next car, was mentioned as having been present, but the witness did not remember him, though Davis was presented in court. It is expected that the State will present Davis as a rebuttal witness.

Silliman said that Motlow usually had a mileage book. This is by way of accounting for his lack of a ticket on the night in question.

"Ignorance of Law" Brings Penalty on Mrs. I. I. Bloomingdale for Bringing Gems to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Ignorance of the law today was declared to have been responsible for the failure of Mrs. Irving I. Bloomingdale to declare dutiable jewelry on her arrival from Europe on the steamship Aquitania Nov. 14.

This was the statement of Ralph Wolfe, attorney for Mrs. Bloomingdale, who is the wife of one of the owners of a large Manhattan department store. Wolfe added that Mrs. Bloomingdale would "settle the case out of the courts." Customs authorities have demanded $120,700 for the return of the seized gems, which have an appraised value of $80,000.

Part of the gems Mrs. Bloomingdale failed to declare, Wolfe said, were not her property, having been brought here by her "on approval." Others, he said, were jewels purchased here but reset abroad. Mrs. Bloomingdale was ignortant of the law's demand that such gems be declared, he said.

Philip Elting, Collector of the Port, said that there were "certain mitigating circumstances" for Mrs. Bloomingdale's failure to declare the jewelry, but added that there were other instances, notably that of several pearls purchased abroad, in which the merchant's wife had made no declarations.

The seizure, announced by Federal authorities yesterday, was the second largest made at this port in years and the second large seizure from a woman during the past week. Gems valued at $17,000 were taken from Mrs. Julius S. Bache, a banker's wife, less than a week ago.

MAN, RUN DOWN BY AUTO, DIES OF HIS INJURIES

Stenographer Says Victim Stepped Directly Into the Path of His Machine on Wet Pavement.

James Pyne, 42 years old, of 1022 Rutger street, died today at city hospital of a fractured skull, suffered at 9:50 o'clock last night, when run down by an automobile in front of 1501 South Broadway.

His death brought the total of automobile fatalities in St. Louis this year to 171, as compared with 142 in the same period last year.

The driver, Delmar Ordinacher, 22 years old, of 802 Geyer avenue, a stenographer employed by the Wabash Railroad, said it was raining and that Pyne, who was crossing Broadway from west to east, stepped directly in front of his car and was knocked down before the machine could be brought to a stop on the wet pavement.

Pyne is survived by his wife.

Autoist Picks Up Victim, Then Leaves Him Dazed on Curb.

Two motorists injured pedestrians last night and feloniously fled from the scene.

Frank Hogan, 52 years old, of 413 South Broadway, suffered lacerations of the scalp and severe body bruises when knocked down by an automobile at Broadway and Clark avenue, the driver of which took him in the car and started for City Hospital. When within three blocks of the hospital the motorist put his dazed victim out of the car, setting him on the curb, and drove rapidly away. Hogan was found by a passing motorist and taken to the hospital.

Henry A. Burns, 46, of 4328A Clayton avenue, was run down at Clayton and Vandeventer avenues by a car that did not stop. His collar bone was broken and he was internally injured.

Mrs. Anna Dore of Overland, St. Louis County, and her 3-year-old son, Edward, suffered minor cuts and bruises when they were thrown through the windshield of their automobile Saturday night in a collision with another automobile at Page boulevard and Cora avenue.

A dozen other persons were cut and bruised in several minor automobile accidents Saturday night and yesterday.

Coroner's Jury Exonerates Driver in Death of Boy, 8.

A Coroner's verdict of accident was returned today in the death of 8-year-old William Crowder, 4137A Lee avenue, who was killed by an automobile driven by Arthur T. Walsh, 4100A Lexington avenue, Saturday night.

Other witnesses besides Walsh testified the child attempted to cross Fair avenue several feet from the Lee avenue intersection. Walsh asserted that he was not speeding and had just shifted gears. The boy, he said, ran across the street directly in front of his machine and in attempting to stop, fell under the wheels. Several witnesses corroborated Walsh's testimony.

LAWYER WANTS LABORER'S PAY

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Dewitt T. Law of Montana, a wounded world war veteran, who went into the Army a common laborer and came out of the Veterans' Bureau vocation school a lawyer, today asked the Supreme Court to grant him permanent total disability pay because he no longer is able to work as a laborer.

Law lost a leg and an arm in battle and he seeks compensation, under that section of the statutes authorizing it in cases where the veteran no longer is able to work at his customary calling. In addition to his education at a law school, and a long period of medical treatment, Law was given at Government expense a course of training in stenography and bookkeeping. In his capacity as a lawyer, he appeared today before the highest court and argued his own case.

CITY HOSPITAL PATIENT KILLS HIMSELF IN SECOND ATTEMPT

Daniel Daly Dies of Fractured Skull Two Hours After Diving Through Closed Window.

Daniel Daly, 59 years old, a patient at city hospital, dived headlong through a closed window at noon today in a second attempt to end his life. He died two hours later, without regaining consciousness, of a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Daly had swallowed poison Saturday night and came to the hospital alone asking for treatment. Supt. Scharff said he was in a first floor medical ward, bound by straps to a cot, pending his removal to the observation ward. At noon, while a nurse was treating another patient, Daly broke the straps, sprang from the cot and plunged headlong through a window. He was found in a concrete areaway, 15 feet below.

When Daly applied for treatment he gave his address as 2608 Locust street, and said he swallowed the poison while despondent over his inability to find work at his trade as electrician.

FRANK STUART IS DENIED DIVORCE

Wife Is Also Refused Decision in Separate Maintenance and Breach of Contract Suit.

The divorce petition of Frank Stuart, president of the Plapao Laboratories Inc., and the separate maintenance suit of his wife, Mrs. Lillian Stuart, former musical comedy actress, were denied today at Clayton by Circuit Judge McElhinney, who held evidence insufficient in each case.

Says Husband Was Cold.

In her separate maintenance suit filed last January, Mrs. Stuart charged her husband with being cold, indifferent and quarrelsome, and said he wrongfully accused her of associating with other men. She also alleged he had failed to make good a promise, before their marriage, to give her $100,000 in stock of the Consolidated Steel and Iron Corporation, of which he is chairman of the board of directors, and also failed to furnish her $200-a-week "pin money." She gave up a stage career, paying her $500 a week, to marry Stuart, she alleged.

Stuart answered his wife's suit about two weeks later with a suit for divorce, charging her with extravagance and general indignities.

Testimony in each case was heard recently at Clayton, and Judge McElhinney had had the cases under advisement.

In her suit for separate maintenance Mrs. Stuart testified she married him for a home, but "he gave me a hotel." When she reminded him their life was one hotel after another he took a "little cheap apartment in Kingsland Court." She testified further that, instead of receiving the $100,000 stock and the $200-a-week pin money she alleged was promised her, she got $25 a week. Mrs. Stuart labored under the false impression that he was a millionaire, Stuart testified, in defending himself against his wife's suit for separate maintenance.

During the trial of Stuart's petition for divorce, testimony was introduced to the effect that Mrs. Stuart associated with at least one man besides her husband. She denied any misconduct in her testimony.

HUSBAND WAS CRUEL, WIFE HELD AS SLAYER SAYS

Mrs. Ida Miller, Tells of Life With John Miller, Laborer, She Is Accused of Poisoning.

A chemist's analysis of the viscera of John Miller, laborer, who died Thursday under mysterious circumstances after an illness of only a few hours, will be submitted today to Coroner J. H. Fulgham of St. Clair County. Mrs. Ida Miller, 41 years old, of 1436 North Thirteenth street, is being held at the East St. Louis Police Station on a warrant charging murder in connection with the death of her husband.

Neatly dressed and composed despite the fact that she had spent two nights in jail, Mrs. Miller today told reporters of her life with Miller, who she said, was cruel during the later days of their marriage. She has steadfastly maintained that she knows nothing of the cause of his death.

Mrs. Miller, a thin, almost emaciated woman with a composed manner of speech and an oddly contrasting nervous voice, was discharged Aug. 7 last, from the State Hospital for the Insane at Alton, where she had been committed two months before following a severe attack of nervousness.

Personality of Prisoner.

When she talked to reporters today she was dressed in a neat black suit and white shirtwaist and wore black kid gloves which she has kept on her hands most of her stay in jail. She has bright gray eyes which fall into an abstracted expression now and then as she loses the thread of her conversation. Several times during her talk with reporters today she wandered suddered suddenly from her subject an had to be brought back again.

She showed no trace of resentment as she outlined various cruelties which she said were practiced on her in late years by her husband. On Thanksgiving day last year, she said, he threw several buckets of cold water on her and on other occasions he pulled her hair, and choked or struck her, she said. There are four children by the marriage ranging from 11 to 19 years of age.

On the day of Miller's death he had breakfast at home with the family, his widow said. The meal consisted of oranges, bacon, coffee and bread and butter.

Prepared His Last Meal.

"I prepared it myself," Mrs. Miller said, "and I recall that he had two cups of coffee. I poured one cup and his sister, Mrs. Sally Philips, who lives with us, poured the other. He did not complain of illness at that time, beyond a stomach ailment which had been troubling him."

Miller took his lunch from home to a plant of the East St. Louis & Interurban Water Co., where he was employed as a laborer. He returned to his home at noon suffering from a violent illness and died two hours and a half later. Mrs. Miller was arrested Saturday on a warrant issued by Assistant State's Attorney Freels.

SLAYERS OF MISSOURI SHERIFF PLEAD GUILTY

By the Associated Press.

SEDALIA, Mo., Dec. 8. — Harry and Arthur Defenbaugh, brothers, and Charles Harris, three of five men accused of the murder of Sheriff Garrett Groomer of Benton County, at Warsaw, Sept. 21, this afternoon pleaded guilty before Circuit Judge C. A. Calvird, at Warsaw and were sentenced to life imprisonment in the State penitentiary.

J. G. Bringham, another defendant, pleaded not guilty. His attorney filed a motion for a change of venue and arguments will be heard Tuesday morning.

No action was taken as to Roy Blair, the fifth defendant, at today's session of court. It is reported Blair was the first of the quintet to confess regarding the guilt of the accused.

Since their arrest at Collinsville, Ill., to which place they were trailed by a tourist who passed through Warsaw shortly after the killing, Harris and Bringham have been held in the Jackson County jail.

Clair and the Defenbaugh brothers have been held in the Henry County jail until Nov. 1, when they escaped, and after being recaptured, Blair was kept in Warsaw and the Defenbaugh brothers in the State penitentiary at Jefferson City.

'SUPREME COURT' OF BUILDING INDUSTRY IN SESSION HERE

Large Number of Representatives Here to Present Their Sides in Labor Disputes.

The National Board for Jurisdictional Awards, the "Supreme Court" in the building industry in the United States, convened its last session for 1924 at Hotel Jefferson today, meeting in St. Louis for the first time since its organization in 1919. A large number of representatives of building trades represented on the board are here to present their side of labor disputes to the tribunal.

Following an executive session of the eight members of the board, at which the work of the body was outlined, William J. Spencer of Washington, secretary, said that the meeting probably would not adjourn until Thursday. The meeting of the board here has no significance in relation to local building conditions.

REPORT STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF AIR INDUSTRY

Aeronautic Commission Points Out Means of Getting Various Types and Maintaining Market.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Lack of an adequate aircraft industry is a matter of grave concern to the Government, in the judgment of the National Advisory Commission for Aeronautics as expressed in its annual report transmitted to Congress today by President Coolidge.

"An aircraft industry is absolutely essential to national defense," the report declared. "One lesson of the war that will not be forgotten is that it takes a great deal of money to develop hastily an aircraft inquiry almost from nothing. The American people can ill afford to pay that price a second time."

The Government is concerned that there should be at least "an adequate nucleus" capable of rapid expansion to meet war needs, the report continued. To that end it recommended steps to remedy substantially "the existing bad condition," but declared that proposals either to increase the volume of Government orders for aircraft or to allot such orders without regard to competitive bidding would not meet the necessity.

Four Steps Suggested.

The committee suggested four steps to produce the necessary types of aircraft at reduced cost and also assure manufacturers of adequate peace-time markets.

The steps to be taken by the aircraft builders were to readjust plants to a peace-time basis immediately and specialization in particular types of ships with a view "to gradual recognition of proprietory rights in new designs."

Those suggested for the Government were to fix a balanced production program for the Army, Navy and Postoffice needs and types "at such intervals as to insure continuity of production and the gradual development of special facilities and skill by each manufacturer in the production of a given type of aircraft."

While the air mail service, particularly with its present efforts toward night flying, was classed as "the most important development in aviation today" so far as stimulating development of commercial viation goes, the report pointed out that the chief reason for faster commercial flying progress in Europe was military.

Subsidy Out of Question.

"They realize more keenly than we do in America the vital necessity of aviation to national defense," the committee said, adding that commercial aviation had been encouraged overseas "in a very practical way, principally by subsidizing common carriers by air."

"In the United States," it was added, "direct subsidy appears to be out of the question, because of our adherence to a traditional policy. In our country aviation must make its own way."

While speed and maneuverability might be prime military factors for aircraft, civil aviation required more in the way of safety in operation and low cost of equipment and maintenance, the report said. The point where these economic factors with aircraft justified general use of air routes had not been reached in the United States, it added. As general recommendations, the board suggested:

The continuous prosecution of scientific research work.

Continuation of the air mail service under the Postoffice Department, with the ground equipped for night flying from New York to San Francisco.

Steps to increase the reliability and economy of operation of commercial aircraft, with reasonable regulation of flyers and flying fields and necessary aids to navigation along designated national airways.

Continued study of the air defense problem and continued support of aviation development in the army and navy.

In transmitting the report, President Coolidge concurred in the general recommendations and agreed "that in the last analysis substantial progress in aviation is dependent upon the continuous prosecution of scientific research."

"Through the work of this committee," he said, "the talent of America has been marshaled in the scientific study of the problems of flight, with the result that today America occupies a position in the forefront of progressive nations in the technical development of aeronautics."

MERCHANT SHIPS TO BE SOLD

Chairman O'Connor Also to Advocate Scrapping Part of Fleet.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Chairman O'Connor of the Shipping Board announced yesterday that he would advocate the scrapping of part of the board's laid-up fleet of 900 steel vessels at an early meeting of the board. He declared the expense of maintaining the boats, with the constant depreciation in their value, made their disposal imperative.

Of the 900 steel vessels, the chairman said, there are at least 400 "which, under the most liberal calculations, are not required in the promotion and maintenance of the American merchant marine. Of the 400, at least half are not suitable for use even if they were required. I shall recommend that we immediately proceed with the sale of 175 of the vessels, and later sell such others as may be determined upon."

MAN, 72, ARRESTED FOR COUNTERFEITING

Ex-Convict Charged With Raising Small Bills to Larger Ones.

A tall, white-haired ex-convict, 72 years old, who, according to his own admission, has supported himself for most of his life by raising $1 bills to tens and $2 bills to twenties, is again in tow at the office of the Federal Secret Service Bureau here, following his arrest at Tenth and Market streets by Detective Sergeant Tony Werner yesterday.

Asked his name at police headquarters, the aged counterfeiter hesitated. "I guess you can put it down as James Nolan," he said, "but I've had so many aliases I don't know for sure."

Stephan Connell, chief of secret service operatives, was more certain, however, for he had met the prisoner four times before, under circumstances just as embarrassing to Nolan. The first occasion was in New York, 25 years ago, when Nolan was arrested, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years at Leavenworth for the same offense. The next time was at St. Joseph, Mo., in May, 1908, same offense, same penalty. Again they met in St. Louis under similar circumstances in June, 1912, and still another time at Springfield, Ill., in June, 1916.

Identifies Suspect's Work.

In the course of all these meetings Connell acquired such a familiarity with Nolan's peculiar technique that it was no task for him to recognize the handiwork when on Dec. 3, Ben Agruss, proprietor of a secondhand clothing store at 712 Market street, sent in a new $5 bill that had been converted into a twenty. He immediately supplied the police with a description of his old acquaintance.

Yesterday Detective Sergeant Werner was walking along Market and espied Nolan. The prisoner said he was staying at the New St. Clair Hotel, 1141 Market street, registered as James Murphy. Detectives went to his room. There they found his traditional equipment—some nails flattened at the point, some oils, some crayon, powder and ink. In his pockets they found two more raised bills.

Admits His Guilt.

Nolan readily admitted his guilt, but insisted he had served only three penitentiary terms. Connell said the number was at least five.

According to Agruss, Nolan entered his store on Nov. 28 and looke dat an overcoat. On Dec. 3 he returned, purchased the coat for $7.50 and tendered a $20 bill in payment. Shortly after his departure, Agruss discovered the bill had been raised. It was a new Lincoln $5 bill, supposed to be counterfeit-proof. Nolan had on the overcoat was arrested.

Connell said Nolan's practice for many years has been to apply for admission at county poorhouses in the winter and while there raise enough bills to tide him over the summer. This he accomplished with simple home-made tools. Nolan admitted he usually made about $15 a day when active. He said he had been in St. Louis two weeks.

$5,000,000 NEW UNION ELECTRIC ISSUE AUTHORIZED

The Bonds Will Bear Interest at 5 Per Cent Annually and Run for 30 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—The State Public Service Commission today issued an order authorizing the Union Electric Light and Power Co. of St. Louis, to issue $5,000,000 in bonds, the proceeds to be used in reimbursing the company treasury for money expended from operating revenue for extensions and improvements within the last four or five years.

The bonds will bear interest at 5 per cent and run for 30 years, maturing in 1954.

Application filed by the Union Electric for authority to issue the bonds stated the company had expended approximately $9,000,000 for betterments and extensions, and under the terms of the present mortgage covering the property, it was entitled to issue new bonds up to 85 per cent of any money actually expended for improvements.

WILLIAM WOODS COLLEGE HEAD ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON

Dr. E. R. Cockrell, now president of William Woods College, Fulton, Mo., was entertained at a luncheon to day at the Missouri Athletic Club by alumnae of the school, St. Louis members of the board of governors and ministers of St. Louis Christian churches.

Pointing out the advantages of his school, Dr. Cockrell declared that "this is woman's day." "She has come into her own socially, economically and politically," he said, "and it is incumbent upon society to educate woman for her activities which no longer are restricted to the confines of her home."

Mrs. J. B. Williams, president of the local alumnae organization, and W. E. Jameson, chairman of the board of managers, also spoke.

Negro Shot and Killed.

Joseph Olle, 25 years old, a negro, living in the 2200 block of Washington avenue, was shot and killed early yesterday by John R. Shaw, 30, a negro, of 2026A Biddle street, who told police after his arrest late yesterday he shot Olle in self-defense after an argument arising over a dice game. The shooting occurred in Shaw's room at the Biddle street address.

ST. LOUIS
the City of Opportunity

THE American by nature will not stagnate. In pursuit of business success or his family's happiness, he is constantly seeking the gates of fresh endeavor.

Today, it is St. Louis that holds the center of the stage. Commerce finds here the basic means for its economic expansion. Where the business man points on the nation's map is well worth your watching.

Shifting centers of population, rapid changes in the making and sale and transportation of merchandise have given St. Louis its great chance. Quick to realize the new day, St. Louis, through its Chamber of Commerce, through the research organization of its Terminal Railroad Association, and by the courage of its people in approving a bond issue of more than eighty-seven million dollars, is laying the foundation of an unprecedented growth.

By locating a factory in St. Louis you can reach two-thirds of the United States by rail or river at a lower freight cost than manufacturers in any other large industrial city. In St. Louis you will be nearer the great raw material sources.

It would be interesting and profitable for you to read the whole story of St. Louis of today.

The Message of
ST. LOUIS
It Affects Your Net Profits

WHETHER you manufacture or are financially interested in the production of boots, bricks or shaving soap, you are interested in net profits, aren't you?

All of which brings us to the nub of the very important fact that your net profits will be greater if you do your manufacturing — or part of it — in St. Louis.

St. Louis is at the nation's crossroads — neither North nor South, East nor West, it is all of none and part of each. St. Louis is the geographical and industrial hub of the nation.

When you buy supplies, your plant in St. Louis is nearest the great raw material sources, thus adding to your profits through economies in time and freight costs. Being at the center, St. Louis shippers reach two-thirds of the United States at lower shipping costs than any other great industrial center. This again adds to your profits in the distribution of the finished product.

St. Louis is the country's second largest railroad center. It is fourth in bank clearings. It is a city of diversified industry—114 kinds. No depression in one line of manufacture can seriously affect its prosperity.

We will make an industrial survey in St. Louis for you, or have an experienced representative present to pursue the advantages of St. Louis. Write our General Secretary.

Taking St. Louis' Message to New York

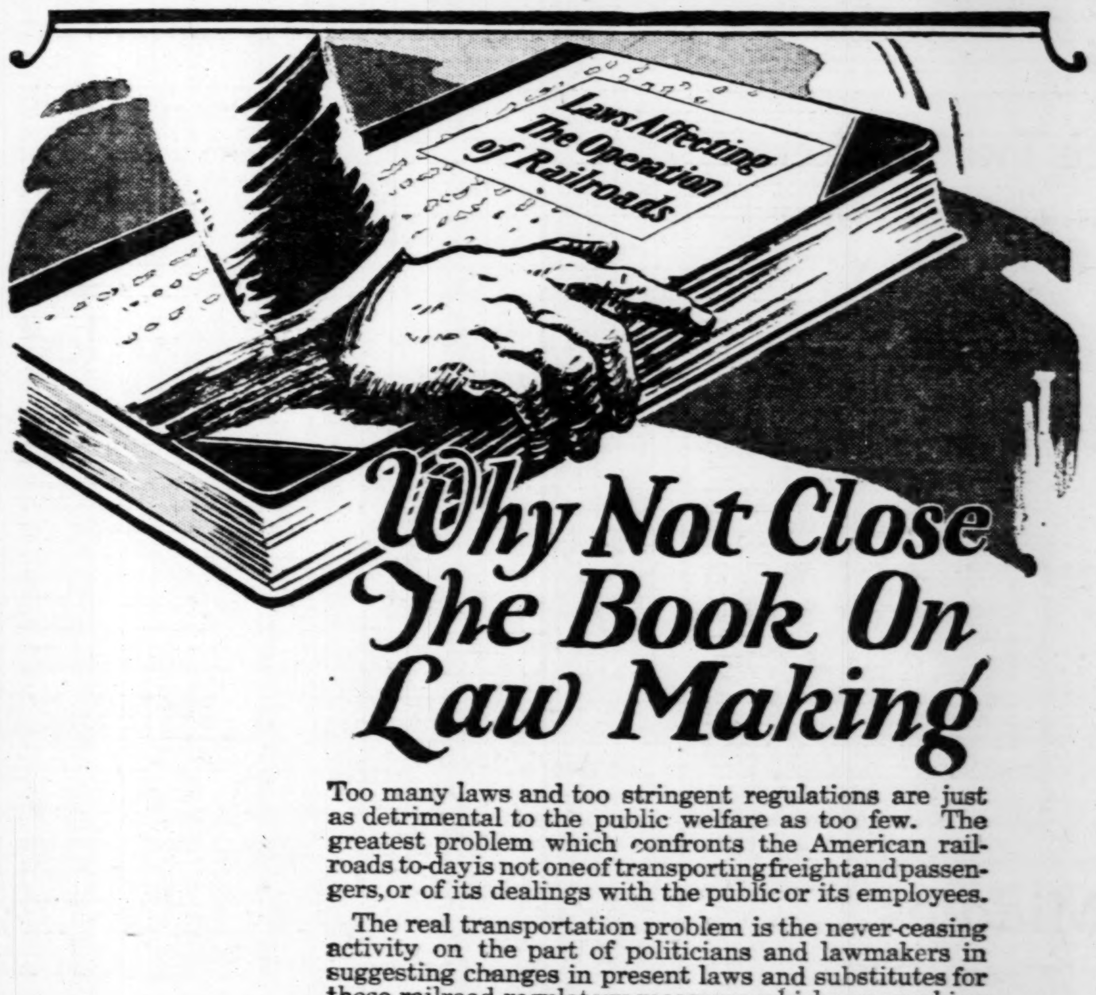

THE advertisements reproduced above, which are a part of the St. Louis Municipal Advertising Campaign, carried the message of St. Louis to the nation's financial center. They told financiers and business interests generally in New York of the growing importance of St. Louis as an industrial and commercial city.

These advertisements appeared in November in the following New York City newspapers having a combined circulation of approximately 1,100,000 daily:

New York Times	New York Herald-Tribune
New York World	Journal of Commerce
New York Post	New York Commercial

This advertising informs financial interests and manufacturers of New York of the value of St. Louis as an industrial location and distributing point.

Why Not Close The Book On Law Making

Too many laws and too stringent regulations are just as detrimental to the public welfare as too few. The greatest problem which confronts the American railroads to-day is not one of transporting freight and passengers, or of its dealings with the public or its employees.

The real transportation problem is the never-ceasing activity on the part of politicians and lawmakers in suggesting changes in present laws and substitutes for those railroad regulatory measures which are working satisfactorily. In addition to suggested changes, new laws affecting the railroads are being proposed in many states and in the National Congress.

Why not give the railroads a legislative holiday? Why not close the book on lawmaking until there is a well-demonstrated need for new or different regulatory measures; and permit the carriers to operate efficiently and satisfactorily; continuing to afford to the people of the United States the best transportation facilities on the face of the globe, at the lowest cost to the people?

Just at this time it is interesting to know that the actual Governmental expenditures on account of railroad regulation during the year of 1923, totaled $5,293,444.00.

NO MORE CASTOR OIL FOR THE CHILDREN

Give Them Haley's Magnesia-Oil

Mothers, there's an easy way now to correct that sour stomach, and to relieve the effect of something that has "disagreed" with the youngsters. Simply give them a teaspoonful or more of Haley's Magnesia-Oil.

It has no oily taste—can be mixed with milk and given children without their knowledge—and it's harmless. A big dose for emergencies is perfectly safe and promptly effective. There is no griping or other unpleasant effect. Haley's Magnesia-Oil is simply milk of magnesia and mineral oil combined.

The oil carries the magnesia straight to the lower bowel, where most "stomach trouble" originates. The milk of magnesia neutralizes the acids and the mineral oil lubricates and aids nature quickly to remove the cause of the trouble. Both work together.

If your druggist can't supply Haley's Magnesia-Oil we will mail a bottle postpaid on receipt of price. Trial size, 35c; family size, $1. The Haley M-O Company, Indianapolis, Ind.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

How She Took On 15 Pounds—Regained Her Strength and Lost All Nervousness.

The greatest strength-giver and producer of good healthy flesh is Cod Liver Oil. It's full of vitamines.

But it's nasty stuff—ill-smelling and hard to take, and usually upsets the stomach.

Thank goodness! we don't have to take it from the bottle any more, for now Woff-Wilson Drug Co. Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Enderle Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and all druggists are selling McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy, so that you can get the real Cod Liver Oil in condensed form and get just the same results as with the horrible smelling liquid.

Men and women, weak, thin and nervous, are urged to put on weight and get back their health and strength with these wonderful tablets.

One woman gained 15 pounds in five weeks, and that's going fast enough for anyone.

Only 60 cents for 60 tablets, and if they don't put five pounds of flesh on any thin person in thirty days—why, money back and no quibbling about it, either.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

MORS KLILED HIS WIFE, KID M' COY'S DEFENSE

Attorney Tells Court as Trial Opens He Will Prove Former Boxer Innocent.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 8.—Defense Attorney George Shreve, appearing for Kid McCoy, charged with the murder of Mrs. Theresa W. Mors, divorced wife of Albert Mors, antique dealer, here, last August, told the court today at the opening of the trial that he expected to prove that Mors killed his own wife and that McCoy had nothing to do with it.

Shreve declared that he would present two lines of evidence to support his contention. He said he would call Mrs. Iva Martin, who lived in the apartment house where Mrs. Mors was slain, to testify, as she already had done before the grand jury, that after she heard the shot fired in the apartment where McCoy and Mrs. Mors were living, under the name of Mr. and Mrs. Shields, she saw a "thickset" man running away who was not McCoy. Shreve declared that Mrs. Martin would identify this man as Mors.

The defense attorney also said he would produce proof that in 1921 in New York City Mrs. Mors had willed all her property, including $31,000 life insurance, to her then husband, Albert Mors.

McCoy had maintained, since the day of his arrest, that Mrs. Mors, divorced wife of Albert A. Mors, antique dealer, committed suicide in his presence, despite his efforts to prevent her. In despair and rage over her act, he said, he armed himself and went out to find and kill Mors, whom he blamed for the tragedy. Failing to find his man, he shot and wounded two men and a woman in and near the Mors antique shop.

McCoy's sister, however, Mrs. Jennie Thomas, told the grand jury which indicted him that her brother came to her the night of the shooting, gave her jewelry afterward identified as having been the property of Mrs. Mors, and confessed "I'm afraid I killed that woman."

Aside from Mrs. Martin's story and McCoy's suicide version of the killing, the defense has an alienist's report that the former fighter is prey to an incurable brain disease which has already affected his mentality and will drive him into his grave or complete insanity within a few years.

ANXIOUS TO GO TO PRISON RIGHT AWAY

Alonzo Dowell would like to go to the Penitentiary right away, but the Sheriff's office here, and the St. Louis County authorities, can see no occasion for haste. Awhile back, Dowell was not in such a hurry to make the journey to Jefferson City. In fact, he furnished a $5000 appeal bond after he was convicted of robbery in the city, and received a 5-year sentence.

Dowell is one of two negroes who were indicted recently at Clayton for the robbery of Mrs. W. Arthur Stickney, near her home on the St. Louis County Club grounds, the evening of Nov. 10. The robbers took $85, and jewelry valued at $15,000. Dowell, after his arrest, admitted his guilt and named as his companion Homer Brown, who was arrested and indicted, but has not confessed.

Since being indicted, Dowell has dismissed his appeal bond in the St. Louis robbery case, and has signified that he is ready to begin serving his five years. The County authorities will hold him in jail at Clayton, with the expectation of giving him a much longer term. His action in dismissing his appeal is similar to that of Robert Hill, a negro, who, as told in the Post-Dispatch recently, tried to railroad himself into the penitentiary for a two-year term, after being arrested and identified in the Chesterfield bank robbery in the county.

35 SUSPECTS ARRESTED IN ROUNDUP IN COUNTY

Roadhouses Raided on Order of Sheriff Willmann Following Payroll Robbery.

Thirty-five suspects were arrested by St. Louis County Deputy Sheriffs Saturday night and yesterday after an order had been issued by Sheriff Willmann to arrest all suspicious characters. His order followed the $11,355 payroll robbery last Friday of employes of the Mazda Lamp Works in the 6200 block on Etzel avenue, just outside the city limits. Two of the five men committing the robbery have been arrested and identified as participants.

Most of the suspects were arrested in county roadhouses. At the Blue Front Inn, formerly owned by "Jelly Roll" Hogan, gang leader, deputies arrested "Little Green Onions" Cipolla and another police character. Cipolla, the deputies reported, attempted to escape and was halted only after several shots had been fired to frighten him. Unless identified in recent robberies, the suspects will be released today.

Packers' Decree Inquiry by Senate.

By the Associated Press.

The decree contemplated sale by the packing companies of certain subsidiary lines, and Norris indicated that he acted because of reports that the agreement was to be modified. The Commission was asked "to report concisely at the earliest possible moment" all available information regarding proposed changes in the decree and the probable effect.

PLAZA COMMISSION ARCHITECTS CHOSEN

Kinsey Makes Public Result of Secret Vote by St. Louis Chapter.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service today made public the names of the eight architects, chosen by secret ballot of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, as a suggested commission of architects to supervise the laying out of the plaza plan and designing the buildings thereon.

The ballots, as has been told, were distributed to the members last week, together with a roster of the chapter membership. The individual member was instructed to write out the names of eight St. Louis architects, not more than one in each firm, as constituting the voter's best judgment of the personnel of the commission. The eight architects receiving the highest number of votes were then certified to the city, as the chapter's suggestion of the personnel of the commission. The ballots, opened Wednesday in the office of William B. Ittner, architect, Board of Education Building, showed the following result:

J. L. Mauran, Mauran, Russell & Crowell, 54 votes; Louis La Beaume, of La Beaume & Klein, 52; William B. Ittner, 50; E. C. Klipstein, Klipstein & Rathmann, 45; J. P. Jamieson, Jamieson & Spear, 42; T. C. Young, 38; G. Gerrand, Gerrand & Fitch, 31, and E. Helfensteller, Helfensteller, Hirsch & Watson, 26.

President Kinsey said today he had sought the advice of the St. Louis chapter for the creation of the suggested commission. The architects' commission has been incorporated in an ordinance, permitting the city to deal with the commission as a unit, he said, but added that the ordinance had not been approved by the Board of Public Service nor by the Board of Aldermen. This course may take six or seven weeks, he said, and construction of the ordinance to permit appointment of architects outside the chapter, is quite likely.

In its recommendations to President Kinsey, the St. Louis chapter set out that it would lay out the plaza plan, without fee, except for actual costs of draftmanship, administration, etc., similar to the plan followed by the architects of Los Angeles, who laid out that city's administrative center for a fee of $1. In the designing of the buildings the regular scale of fees will be charged.

PEOPLE'S MOTORBUS HEAD DEFENDS DOUBLE-DECK VEHICLE

Meade Issues Statement on How Machines Relieve Congestion in Traffic Areas.

Richard W. Meade, president of the Peoples Motorbus Co., today issued a statement, calling attention to the part played by double-decked transportation vehicles in relieving congested areas of heavy traffic. The statement pointed out that the street space occupied per passenger by double-decked cars and busses was much less than that occupied by single-decked vehicles.

"Street railway men always urge against the double-deck car that it is too slow in operation and if operated according to their customary practice it probably would be," the statement reads. "However, if no passengers beyond seating capacity were admitted, thus keeping aisles free, I am convinced it would be fully as quick in operation as the better types of single-deck equipment.

"The London double-deck tram with its 78 seats occupies but little more than 3 square feet of street space for each passenger, exactly the space required by some of our more enlightened public utility commissions for each standing passenger carried. Against this the single deck car occupies from 6 to 9½ square feet of street space for every passenger seat."

Meade said the double-deck car had never had a fair trial in the United States thus far because it was interspersed with the regular service of single-deck cars and was operated on the 'always-room-for-one-more' plan.

DIES AFTER TAKING GASOLINE PREPARATION BY MISTAKE

Edwin Hovey Was Doctoring Self for Indigestion and Got Hold of Wrong Bottle.

Edwin Hovey, 43 years old, of 4141 Delmar boulevard, died at his home shortly before noon yesterday after drinking a poisonous gasoline preparation by mistake for medicine he had been taking to relieve indigestion.

His wife told police he complained of pains in the abdomen early yesterday and took some of the medicine. Later he returned to the cabinet for more, but immediately after the second dose collapsed. Investigation, she said, disclosed he had swallowed the contents of the wrong bottle. Emergency treatment by a physician who was summoned failed to relieve him.

BETTER THAN WHISKEY FOR COLDS AND FLU

The sensation of the drug trade is Aspironal, the two-minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the people as ten times as quick and effective as whiskey, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are supplied with the wonderful elixir, so all you have to do is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk half a dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls. With your watch in your hand, take the drink at one swallow and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel the distressing symptoms of your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

Take the remainder of the bottle home to your wife and children, for Aspironal is by far the safest and most effective, the easiest to take and the most agreeable cold and cough remedy for children as well as adults. Quickest relief for catarrhal croup and children's choking up at night.

SOME improvements, taxes, insurance, education for your children, medical aid—these things are necessities and must be provided whether you have the ready money or not.

Some people save the money in advance of such needs and have it ready. Others secure loans for such purposes from the Industrial Loan Company and then save a little each week with which to pay off the obligation.

If you are in immediate need of funds, get them from us. $100 costs you 8% and you repay $2 per week for 50 weeks. Other amounts on the same basis. No red tape, no fees, no commissions. Your character and earning power, endorsed by two friends, is our security. Come in and talk it over.

WALSH TO FIGHT FOR INCOME TAX PUBLICITY

Says Principle Is as Old as Property Taxation and Is Check on Favoritism.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—Senator Walsh of Montana renewed his warfare against the repeal of income tax publicity by issuing a long statement yesterday ridiculing the idea that the publicity feature is novel, an invasion of private property rights, or in any way burdensome.

On the contrary, he contends that it makes for more honest administration of the law. Though not expressing the Democratic party view, Walsh represents the Western sentiment on both sides of the Senate chamber. It is widespread and formidable enough to show the futility of trying to put through the publicity repealer at the present short session.

Administration Senators who favor the recommendation in Mr. Coolidge's message for elimination of the publicity clause are convinced of the impossibility of action now, but believe the new Congress will have the votes necessary to make the change. Walsh's contingent is determined to campaign from now on against the contemplated alteration.

Principle Not New.

"There is nothing new or startling in the principle of tax publicity," said Walsh. "It is an essential part of the system of property taxation long in vogue in this country, perhaps universally pursued by the states and dating from the beginning of organized government that every individual, natural or corporate, is required by law to schedule his property for assessment.

"It must be evident to all that the prevailing system is a most powerful check upon favoritism in the assessment of property and that to abandon the feature of publicity which characterizes it would be but to offer a premium not only to injustice but to corruption.

"These considerations apply with equal force to the income tax law. Some of the revelations made by the publicity which has been the subject of so much adverse comment are of the most startling character. Persons popularly believed to be the fortunate recipients of huge incomes appear to have escaped with a tax perfectly trifling in amount, and in some cases have paid nothing at all.

"The opportunity to profit illegally in the administration of the income tax law, staggering at the best. Even with the widest publicity, graft could not be altogether eliminated.

Effect of Publicity.

"The publicity provision must operate, as it seems to me, first to constrain the taxpayer to make a fuller disclosure of his income; second, to constrain the taxing officers to a more diligent inquiry into the accuracy of the return, and third, to a more honest discharge of the duties devolving upon them to exact from every man his share of the burden of government imposed upon him by law."

MAPLEWOOD ROUTE OF BUS LINE EXTENDED DOWNTOWN

The Maplewood route of the People's Motorbus Co. was extended intothe downtown district today over the Lindell boulevard-Locust street route. Formerly, the Maplewood line extended only as far east as Union boulevard and Waterman avenue.

The western loop of the line begins at Manchester avenue and Big Bend road and runs south on Big Bend road to Maple avenue, east to Sutton avenue and north to Manchester avenue, where it runs east to McCausland avenue, north in McCausland avenue and Skinker road to Waterman avenue, east in Waterman avenue to Union boulevard and south to Lindel boulevard where it follows the Lindell boulevard-Locust street route to Twelfth boulevard.

During peak hours the line will continue north in Twelfth boulevard to Washington avenue and east to the Fourth street loop. During the middle of the day it will turn west from Twelfth boulevard in Washington avenue, south on Fourteenth street and west on Locust street.

Barrett Names Assistant.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 8.—Attorney-General Barrett today announced the appointment of Ellison Poulton of Canton, as an Assistant Attorney-General. Poulton has been chief clerk in the department, but has been carrying the work of an Assistant Attorney-General in the past year. He takes the place of Robert W. Otto, Attorney-General-elect who has resigned to attend to business affairs.

MAN ENDS LIFE WITH SHOT

The body of Phillet Le Pere, 60 years old, of Kirkwood, was found, with a bullet wound in the right temple, early today in a garage in the rear of his home by a neighbor, William Kyle.

A Coroner's verdict of suicide was returned. Pe pere, a retired farmer, had been in ill health for some time. A widow and family survive.

Tribute to Rev. Whiteside.

A memorial was presented by the board of deacons, expressing appreciation of the pastor's work. The membership has been largely increased during Dr. Whiteside's pastorate.

BERNARD SHAW WARNS BOLSHEVIKI TO DISCARD THIRD INTERNATIONAL

All Hope of Solidarity Between Socialism of West and East Europe Lost, Unless Soviet Wakes Up, He Says.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—George Bernard Shaw has supplied the New York World and Post-Dispatch with the text of a dispatch he has sent the Moscow Bolshevik organ, Izvestia, in response to a request for a pronouncement on the Russian situation. It follows:

"I am afraid it is not possible for Izvestia to publish my opinion of the situation created by the abandonment of Anglo-Russian treaties.

"I can only say that as the economic situation will finally dominate the political organization—this you will observe is sound Marxism—it is impossible that the Soviet government will finally get better terms, both in commercial treaties and guarantee loans, from the present Conservative government than the late Labor government dared offer it.

Third International a Handicap.

"But I must add that the Soviet government would do well to disassociate itself from the Third International as speedily as possible and to tell Zinovieff (head of the Third International) plain that he must choose between statesmanship and cinematographic schoolboy nonsense if the Soviet government is to be responsible for his proceedings, which will otherwise make Rovovsky's position here almost impossible. (Christian Rovovsky is Russian charge d'affaires in England).

"I am not referring to the forged letter (a document purporting to come from Zinovieff and advocating revolution in England, which had great bearing in the recent British election) but to a far graver matter.

"The constitution of the International has been translated and published in the London Times and the bourgeois idealism and childish inexperience of men and affairs, which it betrays in every line, have given a serious shock to the friends of the soviet in England.

Not Even Amateur Socialists.

"From the point of view of English Socialists, the members of the Third International do not know even the beginning of their business as Socialists, and the proposition, that the world should take its orders from a handful of Russian novices who seem to have gained their knowledge of modern Socialism by sitting over a drawing room stove and reading pamphlets of the Liberal revolutionists of 1848-70, makes Curzon and Winston Churchill seem extreme modernists in comparison.

"Until Moscow learns to laugh at the Third Internationale and realizes that wherever Socialism is a living force instead of a dead theory it has left Karl Marx as far behind as modern science has left Moses, there will be nothing but misunderstanding in which the dozen most negligible cranks in Russia will correspond with the dozen most negligible cranks in England, both of them convinced that they are the proletariat and revolution and the international, and God knows what else.

Belittles Russian Writings.

"The Russian writings which make the most favorable impression here are those of Trotzky, but even he has allowed himself to speak of H. G. Wells with contempt, which shows that he has not read Mr. Wells' Outline of History, and has, therefore, no suspicion of what an enormous advance on Das Kapital that work represents.

"It is this amazing Russian combination of brilliant literary power and complete emancipation from bourgeois illusions, with absurdly superstitious reverence for the early Victorian prophets of the London suburbs, that makes the literature of the Russian revolution at once so entertaining and so hopeless.

"When even a mind and character as strong as Lenine's was so paralyzed by this superstition that when Wells laughed at the Marxian idols in Moscow he seemed to Lenine to be not exercising an elementary critical right of a free thinker, but simply blaspheming against Divine greatness; that he was too petty a bourgeois to realize that, what hope is there of any understanding of Sidney Webb, an English writer, who has gone far beyond Marx, or for Ramsay MacDonald, or, may I say, for myself?

Inopportune Literary Romancing.

"I sound this alarm because the Soviet Government must wake up to Western realities unless it wishes to become the main bulwark of capitalist imperialism in Europe and America. Zinovieff and his Third Internationale did not intend to wreck an English general election • • • and thereby make the Sudan a present to the British Empire and the River Nile a present to the Sudan Plantations Syndicate, but this is precisely what they did by their inopportune literary romancing which it suits our governing classes very well to pretend to take seriously.

"If that sort of thing continues and the Soviet Government also pretends to take it seriously, or, worse, still does actually take it seriously, then all hope of solidarity between Socialism in the West and East of Europe will fade out and we must go our own way in England without more regard to the policy of Moscow than Moscow has for the policy of Madagascar."

LODGE LEFT ESTATE IN TRUST TO HIS SON AND DAUGHTER

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, Mass., Dec. 8.—The will of the late Senator Cabot Lodge, with four codicils, was filed today. No estimate of the value was given.

His library, estimated at about 20,000 volumes, Senator Lodge left to his grandson, Henry Cabot Lodge. All manuscripts and papers were left to his son, John Ellerton Lodge; his daughter, Constance Williams, and the grandson are literary executors. A trust fund of $5000 was created for the Massachusetts Historical Society, with the provision that one-fifth of the income be added yearly to the principal.

The large villa at Nahant was bequeathed to his daughter, Constance Williams. The residence at Eastern Point, Nahant, was left to his son, John Ellerton Lodge, for his lifetime, to go then to the grandson, Henry Cabot Lodge.

The will left several bequests to employes. Christian McKay will receive $1500 and an annuity of $500, and Harold Hobday and Agnes Power $1500 each. Senator Lodge's secretary, Charles F. Redmond, is to receive $1000.

The residue of the estate is to be left to John Ellerton Lodge, George Cabot Lee and William Crownin Shield Endicott as trustees and executors, the income to be paid to the Senator's children and their issue for 20 years after the death of the last child, when the principal would be divided among the issue and heirs-at-law.

PRINCE OF WALES DEFEATED IN SQUASH TOURNAMENT

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 8.—The Prince of Wales, who was among the 55 entrants for the squash racquets amateur championship begun at the Bath club, today, was eliminated in the first round by T. Bevan, a well-known guardsman tennis player, by the score of 15-7, 12-15, 15-8.

The Prince tried hard to stave off Bevan in the first set, but was unable to get going well and it was not until the second set that he struck real form. Then his fine service and backhand strokes landed him a victory in the set by the score of 15 to 12.

In the last game Bevan, playing brilliantly, got a rushing start on his royal competitor and soon had the score run up to 14-2. The Prince kept plugging away, however, and got six aces before succumbing to the guardsman's onslaught.

S. P. ENGINEMEN VOTE TO STRIKE "IF NECESSARY"

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—Ninety-six per cent of the engineers, firemen, hostlers and hostlers' helpers on the Southern Pacific, El Paso and Southwestern and Arizona Eastern Railroad systems have voted to strike if necessary "to obtain a settlement of matters in controversy," it was announced here today by executives of the firemen's and engineers' brotherhoods.

The strike statement was signed by L. G. Griffing, general chairman of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers, and D. B. Robertson, president of the brotherhood of locomotive firemen and enginemen. No strike date was set, it being stated that an endeavor is being made to settle the controversy through negotiation.

The result of the vote was submitted to William Sproule, president of the Southern Pacific "in the hope of effecting a peaceful settlement," the statement said.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8. — Two interesting reports have been added to the fund of data before Congress on tax-exempt securities, abolition of which is sought by Secretary Mellon as a means of increasing Federal revenues and, according to his contention, saving the income tax system.

Mellon himself has contributed the statement that tax-free securities outstanding have reached the total of $13,284,000,000 and are increasing at the rate of about $1,-000,000,000 annually.

The Federal Trade Commission in its annual report summarized the results of its study, which is recognized as the most exhaustive made of the subject, by saying that on Dec. 31, 1922, there was outstanding about $32,000,000,000 in what were described as tax-free securities.

Of these, however, $20,000,000,-000 were subject to surtaxes, while $12,000,000,000 were wholly tax free. This has served to call attention to the commission's findings, which were given to Congress some time ago when the study was completed.

How Bonds Are Divided.

Of the $32,000,000,000 in wholly or partly tax free bonds, the Trade Commission estimated that business organizations held $10,700,-000,000, a small group of wealthy individuals possessed $4,550,000,-000, and that all other groups or persons controlled $16,770,000,000. This would give a total of $32,020,-000,000.

Senator Smoot, chairman of the Finance Committee, thinks Mellon's estimate is too conservative. He places the total outstanding five years ago at about $10,000,-000,000 and says the increase has been rapid. Every week, in his opinion, there are offerings of millions in new tax-free bonds and some weeks tens of millions. He feels that Western states have issued more of the value of their resources than the Eastern.

In his final report to Congress, Secretary Houston, the last Treasury Secretary under President Wilson, pointed to the investment in tax-free securities by the rich. Secretary Mellon began his campaign against this class of bonds immediately after taking office, estimating in his report of 1921 that the amount outstanding was $10,000,-000,000.

He placed the total in 1922 at $11,000,000,000 and said the increase was $1,000,000,000 annually.

Extent of State Indebtedness.

One of the contributing factors has been the sale of bonds by States to pay for bonuses for soldiers. Experts pointed out that the indebtedness of States is trivial compared with the counties, municipalities and minor subdivisions, amounting only to about 10 per cent.

One of the high estimates made on the value of wholly tax-free securities outstanding is that of the Ways and Means Committee when it was considering the tax reduction bill. The committee gave out on Jan. 11, 1924, an estimate of $14,-670,000,000, which is above anything Secretary Mellon has ventured in his reports.

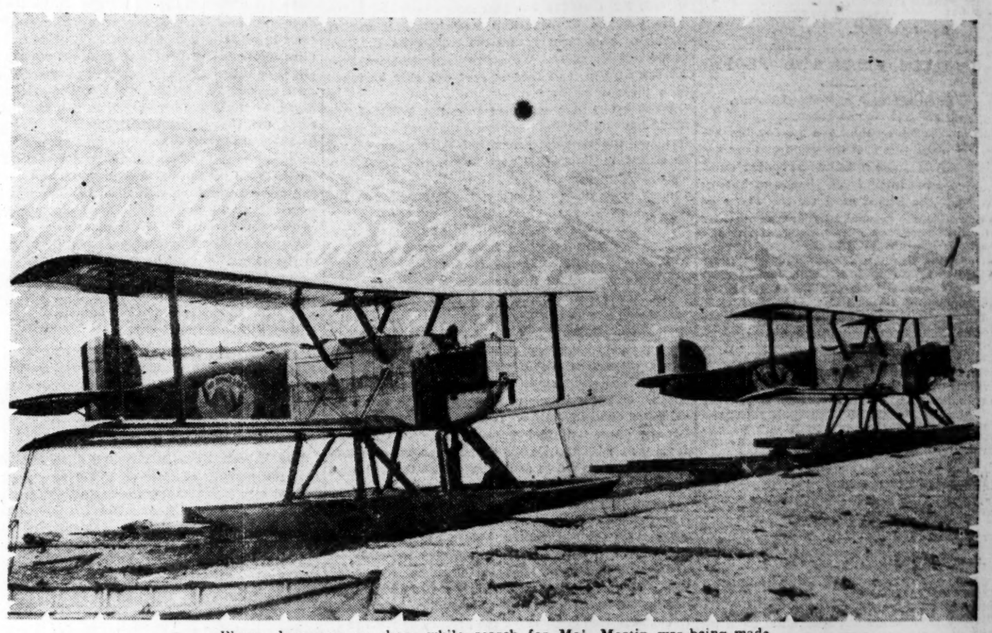

Mellon's report renewed the recommendation for an amendment to the Constitution prohibiting future issues of tax-exempt securities. The Congress now in session defeated it last year, the majority feeling that the advantages in the system to the States outweighed the disadvantages to the Federal Government as pointed out by Mellon.

It is generally believed, and Mellon indicated in his report that he shared the belief, that the present Congress will delay action. Submission to the Senate of this amendment is one of the things the Treasury Secretary undoubtedly will seek from the new Congress.

Repeal of the income tax publicity section of the revenue act, recommended by the President in his annual message, may be taken up by the House Ways and Means Committee at an early date, although no definite decision has been reached. Chairman Green said, after a visit today to the White House.

Adventures of the Round-the-World Flyers

AFLOAT ALL NIGHT ON AN ICY SEA; MAJ. MARTIN'S FIRST BIT OF ILL LUCK

Planes drawn up on shore while search for Maj. Martin was being made.

By LOWELL THOMAS.

(Copyright, by the Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

ALTHOUGH a few brief dispatches were radioed out from the Far North telling the world of the disappearance of Maj. Martin and Sergt. Harvey, the full story of their adventure has never been told. Since then, however, Maj. Martin has turned in a complete report to the chief of the air service, and this constitutes one of the most important chapters in the story of the flight around the world.

"At noon Sergt. Harvey and I ate a part of the sandwiches and drank some of the coffee given us by the ladies of the American Legion of Seward," writes Maj. Martin. "At 2:40 p. m., after being in the air four hours and 20 minutes, Sergt. Harvey called my attention to the fact that our oil pressure was at zero.

Forced to Make Quick Landing.

"This forced us to land with the least possible delay. Fortunately, we were just off Cape Igvak, having passed through Shelikof Strait. The New Orleans, leading, was flying at a thousand feet. The Seattle was at the same altitude, on the left of the flight and about 300 yards to the rear. The Boston and Chicago were on the right at an altitude of around 500 feet.

"It was necessary to use the engine at a reduced r. p. m. in order to glide within the shelter of Cape Igvak. The wind was from the Northwest, blowing at 20 miles an hour. The open sea was rough enough to make landing extremely hazardous, but behind the shelter of Cape Igvak the swells were not so high, and it looked as though we could get down safely."

Maj. Martin says nothing of first having attempted to fly alongside the other planes in order to call their attention to the distress of the Seattle, and no doubt he and Sergt. Harvey were too busy picking out a place to get down safely. As we know from the reports of the other flyers, they were intently watching the course ahead and did not notice the Seattle drop out until it was too late for them to turn back and search without making it impossible for them to get on to Chignik with the small amount of gas and oil remaining in their tanks.

Anchored in Portage Bay.

"The water was very deep in the harbor of Portage Bay," continues Maj. Martin's report. "This necessitated our anchoring within about 100 yards of the shore. Upon examination we found a hole three inches in diameter in the crank case on the left side, under No. 5 cylinder. The connecting rods seemed to be intact, and as no opportunity was ever available to determine the exact cause of this trouble, we assumed that it was caused by the loosening of a connecting rod bolt, permitting all the oil to escape.

"In a previous discussion of such a contingency it had been decided that if a plane were forced down the others would circle around until receiving signals by Very pistol from the plane in distress. As we were not again in contact with the flight, it was assumed that our dropping out was not observed. No doubt all were engaged in accurately checking the position, for we were approaching the headland of the Western peninsula and only an hour and a half out from our destination.

"Sergt. Harvey and I remained aboard the Seattle all that night. We had thought of trying to get ashore to build a fire on the beach. But we gave this up till morning because it meant we would have to wade through icy waters for a hundred yards and then dry our clothes before a bonfire, and we noticed there was very little driftwood on the shore.

Spend Cold, Sleepless Night.

"I tried the self-starter and to our surprise it would not work. No doubt the spline was broken. This left us helpless in case we started to drift. After eating the few malted milk tablets we had we divided the night into watches of four hours each in order to get a little rest, and I took the first watch from 8:30 till 12:30. At 10:45 Harvey said it was impossible to sleep on account of the cold. This was despite the fact that we were clothed in fur-lined flying suits, winter gauntlets, and fleece-lined moccasins. So he offered to take over the watch, and from 10:45 until 2:10 I slept. At this time I awakened with the cold and neither of us slept again during the night.

"It was a calm, clear night, with the moon shining on the precipitous mountains around us, the waters of the bay and the snow-capped peaks. At 4 in the morning Harvey fell asleep with the canvas fastened securely over his outfit.

Destroyers' Arrival Mystifies Them.

"At 4:55 I saw a thin wisp of smoke on the horizon to the southeast off toward Kodiak Island. As the smoke drew near we recognized through our field glasses that it came from the funnels of two destroyers. Having no knowledge of any destroyers in these waters, we were very much mystified."

From the diaries kept by the other members of the flight we know that Lowell Smith had heard of the presence of the destroyers Hull and Cory in the Gulf of Alaska, and he and Nelson Wade had radioed from Chignik for the destroyers to rush to the rescue of Martin and Harvey, and that their commanders had replied that they were steaming for Portage Bay at 31 knots. Smith also had the veteran Alaskan navigator, Capt. Johannsen, of the S. S. Star and the superintendent of the drilling crew at the Standard Oil wells 17 miles inland from Portage Bay, Phil B. Reed, on the way to the rescue, and he had refuelled the planes in order to fly back to help in the search at dawn, if necessary. But fortunately a radio reached Chignik on the morning of the 15th announcing that the destroyer Hull had sighted the plane and that all was well.

Luckily for Martin and Harvey, they had come down at one of the few places on the bleak coast of the Alaskan Peninsula, where there was human habitation. To the south there were no white men for more than 100 miles, and to the north the coast was quite as desolate.

Signal Pistol Attracts Searchers.

"They arrived off the entrance to Portage Bay at 5:30 a. m., traveling at full speed. At minute intervals we fired three rockets with our Very pistol. The destroyer in the lead did not hesitate, but the second ship steamed in very slowly along the eastern shore of the bay. When about a mile distant we saw that they had a small launch swung out on its davits and that they had dropped anchor. When the launch approached the officer in charge informed us that he was the executive officer from the U. S. S. destroyer Hull. We were towed over to the Hull and the Seattle was made fast by a line astern.

"Harvey and I were welcomed on board by Lieutenant-Commander J. C. Hilliard and given a hearty breakfast while radio messages were sent announcing that we had been found. As there are very few boats in these waters, it was hard to tell when we might have been found if it had not been for these destroyers. Sergt. Harvey and I greatly appreciate the dispatch with which they came.

Towed to Kanatak.

"After breakfast we were towed to the little village of Kanatak, where the entire population, about 40 people, turned out to greet us. Upon going ashore we learned that this was their first calm day in eight months. From what we heard regarding the frequency and velocity of the winds, we decided to float the Seattle into a little creek at high tide and then on into a small pond 200 yards from the shore. This was accomplished on the high tide at 11 o'clock that night.

"We were provided with beds in the living room of the home of Mr. Charles Madsen, proprietor of the general store in Kanatak, and after assuaging our hunger, we turned in with a request that they call us about 10 that night, in time to bring the Seattle into the creek with the tide. The creek was very narrow, and it required skillful maneuvering to keep it from being damaged.

"Willie-Waws" Threaten Plane.

"From then on until the night of Monday, April 20, 'willie-waws' of intense velocity like small hurricanes swept down the passes and across the waters of Portage Bay. They seemed to gain terrific momentum as they whirled down the narrow canyon over the ice and snow. So we lived in dread that our plane might be destroyed any hour.

"On Sunday evening, April 19, Harvey and I had just returned from examining the mooring when he heard the howl of a 'woolie.' Jumping to the window, we were just in time to see the water in the creek in front of the Seattle whipped into a spray. Then we saw the plane itself lifted bodily until its left pontoon was clear of the water. We rushed out expecting to find at least one pontoon crushed, but luckily there was no damage."

Lieut. Smith had wired to Capt. Bissell at Dutch Harbor requesting him to rush a new engine, gasoline, oil, and other supplies to Martin and Harvey via the United States coast guard cutter Algonquin, and Maj. Martin radioed to the other members of the flight that he thought it advisable for them to proceed on to Dutch Harbor and await him there because it was a main supply base.

Pays Tribute to Harvey.

When the engine and supplies arrived at Kanatak on the Algonquin they were brought ashore in a whale boat. Wading in the water around the plane and chopping away the ice from the pontoons, Maj. Martin caught a severe cold and was confined to his bed. But Sergt. Harvey, with one of the longshoremen from the Algonquin handling the lines, and with nothing but flickering lanterns for light, had worked all night installing the new engine. It was bitter cold and snowed the entire night. "This was a remarkable feat," says Maj. Martin, "and Harvey is entitled to great credit.

"It turned much colder on the night of April 23, and the ice froze in the lake. The watchman notified the longshoremen who had been helping us and from midnight until 4 a. m. they broke the ice as rapidly as it formed around the plane. But by 8 the next morning the pontoons were completely surrounded by ice. We were afraid that the wind would force the pontoons against the edge of the ice and crush them as the tops were merely made of three-ply veneer.

"We arose at 3 a. m. on the morning of the twenty-fifth and found the weather calm. But it was necessary again to break the ice and float it down the creek before we could move the plane."

Decide on Perilous Ascent.

Then by means of skids and with the aid of a Holt tractor loaned by the Standard Oil Co., the Seattle was finally dragged to the edge of the bay. But the wind had increased to 30 miles an hour, the water had suddenly become very rough in Portage Bay, and they were in great danger of seeing the plane destroyed. It looked equally dangerous either to attempt to take the Seattle back up the creek or take off through the high seas. Maj. Martin decided that the lesser of the two hazards would be to try and take off. Perhaps no aeroplane ever left the water under more critical circumstances.

But about 11 o'clock they got off, circled around over Kanatak three times in doubt as to whether it would be safe to try to fly on to Chignik in view of the fact that a snowstorm was raging and that a high sea was running.

But as a result of the favorable radio reports that had come through that morning, the Major hoped that the storm was only local, and made up his mind to rejoin the flight and take no more chances on having the Seattle destroyed by a "willie-waws" on the bleak shores of Portage Bay.

It was on this flight from Kanatak to Dutch Harbor via Chignik that the Seattle crashed into a mountain and that Martin and Harvey were lost in the remote interior of the uninhabitated Alaskan peninsula.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Encroachment of Federal Power.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHAT warrant have we for the assumption that Congress will not use the power given it by the proposed child labor amendment? The lesson of history—that the surest curb on the abuse of power is the refusal to grant power—by some mysterious reasoning does not apply to the proposed amendment. What Congress has done, Congress will most probably do again. The eighteenth amendment forbids the manufacture of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes. In the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment Congress has meddled in religious services, the arts, medicine and industry. The proposed amendment says that Congress shall have power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age. Let three-fourths of the state Legislatures ratify the proposed amendment and it will be unconstitutional to have a boy of 15 fix the furnace. The Supreme Court has declared that the language of the Constitution means what it says. "Limit, regulate and prohibit" mean "limit, regulate and prohibit."

Furthermore, the powers of Congress are limited in number, but not in degree. There are certain things which Congress may not do, but of the things which Congress may do, there is no accounting to anyone. If Congress may constitutionally forbid a child to work, Congress may, by indirection, say what that child shall do when it is not working. If, unfortunately, the child labor amendment is ratified, then we may look for congressional regulation of schools.

Finally, and this is the only argument which appeals to some people, Congress will have to appoint inspectors, directors of bureaus and all the other officials which a law and a good supply of lame ducks call for. There is little hope for economy and a tax cut if Congress must try to do everything.

Respect for Old Glory.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A NEWS item from Paterson, N. J., states that the Women's Independent Republican League of that city has resolved to knock the hats off all the men who fail to salute the colors passing by. Such a resolution indicates crude manners and poor judgment. A manly man does not carry his respect or his patriotism in his hat. He should not be requested to uncover his head to the flag or to a lady, no more than a woman is expected to uncover hers. It reminds one too much of slavery, and it is an infringement on liberty. No one has the right to prescribe the manner and form in which the individual is to show his respect.

The supercilious have their own ideas about culture and civilization. If they had their way all men would have to wear gaudy, delicately scented ribbons in their hair, not to mention the vari-colored tinsel and fluffy tassels from shoulders to shoes. They used to have the man kneel before the lady and kiss her hand before engaging in a conversation with her. Even today they expect him to stand with his head uncovered while talking to her on the sidewalk or in public places. It looks comical, not to say silly.

Taking one's hat off to the colors is, of course, perfectly in order, and there is nothing silly about it; but to make it compulsory would be ridiculous.

The writer served his country 105 days at the front in France. He respects the flag, but he takes his hat off for nobody.

For a Better Civilization.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT seems that every time someone rises to voice an observation that civilization is crumbling, a wail of protest arises in its defense.

The eminent philosopher and lecturer, Dr. Stanton Coit of England, is the latest one to call our attention to the sign of the times. Dr. Coit outlined the definition of civilization as the rule of the strong over the weak. That is exactly what civilization has developed into, however great its advance over savagry. It is no longer a civilization where physical strength, brute force, is the rule. Civilization knows a mightier strength—the power of material wealth. This basis of civilization is fundamentally as wrong as the former. And it is this civilization that is beginning to realize its weakness.

Giving in to the demands of the underdog, recognizing the right to more power for the submerged, giving the slave freedom, granting women suffrage, giving to labor a greater share of the profit, etc., all these signs of a weakening and crumbling civilization hold out to mankind a promise of something better for the future. Has no one gotten the real message? Has humanity reached its ultimate goal? Is there nothing to look forward to but a repetition of mastery of one portion of mankind over the other?

Let civilization that is fundamentally rotten crumble. Out of its ashes will rise something finer. Mankind is struggling onward and upward.

LEAH W. LEONARD.

THE FARMER AND FOREIGN RELATIONS

Senator Borah, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, is favorably disposed to our entrance into the World Court, provided that tribunal is divorced from the League of Nations. He foresees, however, that if this question is brought before Congress at this time a prolonged discussion will follow, with the result that consideration of measures for farm relief will have to go over until the next Congress, which will not regularly meet until a year from now. Such postponement, he declares, would be unfair to the farmers and a violation of an implied campaign pledge. He insists a domestic question of this magnitude should have precedence over the World Court.

But is farm relief exclusively a domestic question? Mr. Borah apparently thinks so. Yet judgment is unanimous that a Europe able to buy and pay for its food and clothing would be a development of first consequence to the American farmer. Indeed, Mr. Coolidge has just stated that the immediate problem of American agriculture is one of markets. Our farm production cannot be absorbed in the home market. We require a desirable market for the surplus, and that market can only be found in a prosperous Europe.

What effect our entrance into the World Court would have on Europe's economic recovery and, therefore, on the American farmers' difficulties cannot be stated in figures. The effect would be psychological. Obviously, though, it would be stimulating and, in some degree or other, would strengthen Europe's morale.

It is pretty plain, too, from the news in the Sunday papers that Europe's morale needs bolstering. The international situation is not happy—it isn't nearly so hopeful as it was a short time ago. England, for example, is greatly exercised over our negotiations with France in regard to the latter's debt to us. England is anxious, and justly so, about the huge debt France owes her. She would object to any arrangement which would make the United States a preferred creditor of France, with the possibility of her own claim against France being invalidated or uncollectible. It is broadly hinted in the London press that if France should conclude such agreement with the United States then the question of Great Britain's debt to the United States will have to be reopened.

Again, there is the comment on the German situation by the Berlin correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. Had the Nationalists won in the election held yesterday a different, more aggressive Germany, it was predicted, would appear, with the junking of the Dawes plan a possibility. The Nationalists have been beaten, but the fact that such an outcome could even be contemplated emphasizes the precarious posture of European affairs.

What the United States can or should do in the circumstances cannot lightly be determined. What is apparent is that we cannot afford to be indifferent or complacent. Because of the enormous debts owing us and because a Europe at work and earning its living is indispensable to the prosperity of the American farmer, it seems peculiarly shortsighted for any American Senator to dismiss the matter of our foreign relations as unimportant or to fail to discern the close connection between our foreign policy and the very pressing question of relief for the American farmer. For Senator Borah, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, to make such a mistake would be disastrous.

The Woodrow Wilson Peace Foundation, which has awarded its first $25,000 prize to Viscount Robert Cecil, may have to pick only from the foreign field until the shackles of partisan interest and patriotic timidity are removed from the American foreign policy.

A JAIL-BUILDING BOOM.

Attorney-General Stone, in his annual report, urges jail sentences for violators of the prohibition laws. He says the Federal Courts are staggering under the load imposed on them by those laws, that the burden has been aggravated by the complex, intricate tax laws and that already a situation has been reached where we must have more United States Attorneys and must pay them larger salaries.

He cites the fact that 40,000 liquor and tax law cases were disposed of in the last fiscal year, a gain of 4000 over the previous year, and the fines assessed were $2,000,000 greater; but, even so, no appreciable progress was made. Violation, he is convinced, cannot be stopped by fines. A sterner punishment must be had. Hence the jail.

The Attorney-General, however, can hardly be unaware of the fact that the liquor laws have already swollen our jail population. The Federal Penitentiary at Leavenworth, so Warden Biddle said in St. Louis a few months ago, is operating almost at full capacity and must either enlarge its plant or face a congestion dangerous and demoralizing. A similar condition obtains in other Federal prisons. With this state of affairs under the present lenient order what will our plight be if the Attorney-General's recommendation is acted upon and all offenders are sent to prison? Manifestly, we must build more jails. It must be remembered, too, that only a small percentage of these lawbreakers are arrested and brought to trial. But with an adequate staff of United States Attorneys, selected for their ability and paid accordingly, and with more and abler prohibition agents on the job, arrests and convictions will multiply and more commodious prison accommodations will be imperative.

A great jail-building boom may plainly be discerned in the offing. Indeed, if the Attorney-General's recommendations are carried out in letter and spirit the time cannot be far distant when there will be more people inside our prisons than outside.

That will be a rubric day.

The North Pole is not the coldest place in the world, says Explorer Stefansson. Then it won't qualify for a street car transfer point.

CHILDREN IN CITY STREETS.

The Detroit News has compiled figures showing that the number of children killed by street traffic in that city is constantly increasing. Fourteen were killed in November alone. For the period between Jan. 1 and Nov. 30 no less than 93 children lost their lives and 2147 were injured. For the year previous the figures were 87 killed and 2043 injured.

Deploring the number of children killed by automobiles in New York, the New York Evening World asks: "Have we not reached the point where it can be truly said that no child is really safe in the streets of New York City?"

Deaths of children in all large cities, including St. Louis, due to the new traffic conditions, are the most shocking incidents of the annual record of highway accidents. It is evident that something more than perfect traffic laws is needed if we are to minimize this slaughter. And that something must be education of the children, in school and at home, in season and out of season, on the necessity of care and the terrible danger incurred through lack of care.

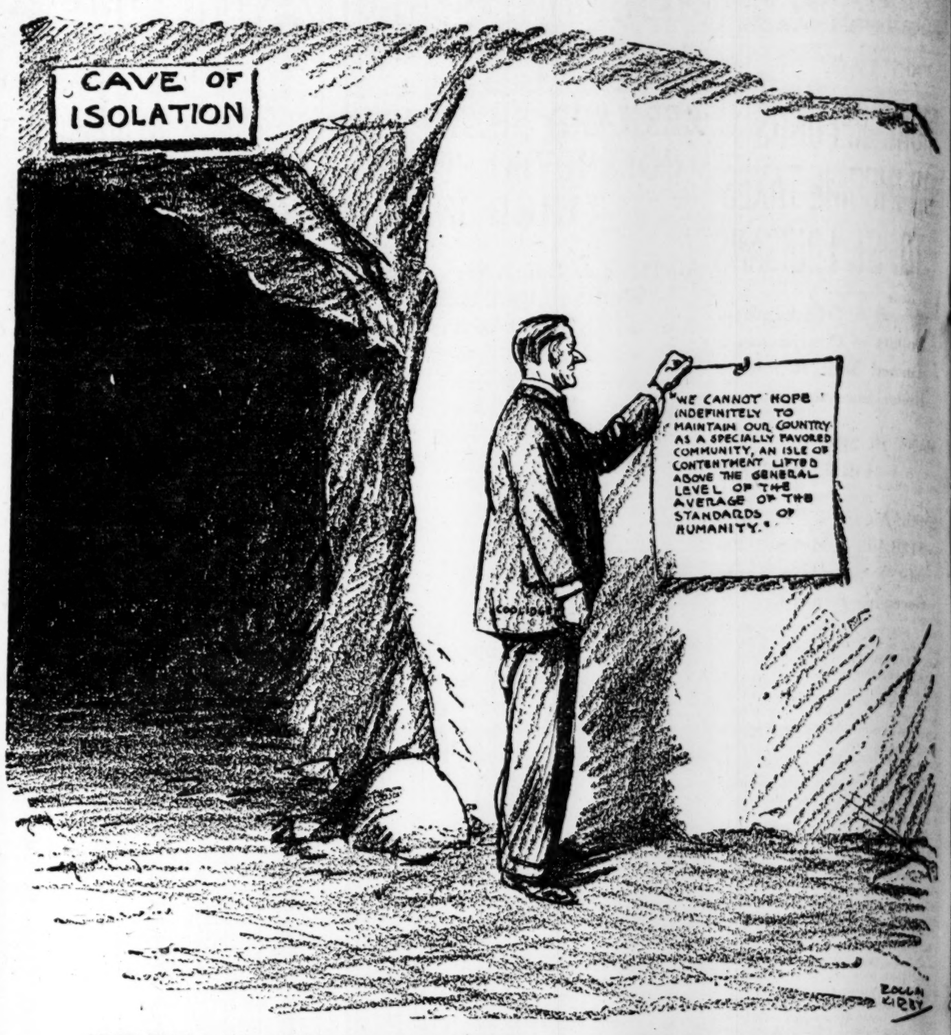

A child can easily be shown how short is a second and be impressed with the fact that an automobile moving at 20 miles an hour shoots forward at the speed of 20 feet to a second of time. This and other facts could be made plain on school blackboards. Parents and guardians, instead of expecting a mere child to learn by experience, should take hold of this problem and teach children, by word and example, to care for themselves on the streets.

For all of us the new age of swift machinery means Learn or Die. But the children will not learn in time unless adults take them in hand.

"OUR DICTIONARY."

Our dictionary once was whole,
And lay upon the shelf;
As reference book it served its role;
We'd visit it by stealth—
Not wishing ignorance to show
To those who thought us wise,
We'd seek for definitions so,
And carry off the prize.

Its back was leathery and smooth,
It never had a fall;
So seldom did it need to move,
It showed no use at all.
When handled by us now and then,
With reverence and with awe
We'd seek the word we fain would ken;
Its contents was our law.

But bear with me—I needs must weep
As now this wreck I view;
Our book, so full of knowledge deep,
No more doth look like new.
Its pages torn have broken loose
And some are lost and gone;
For service now 'tis past all use,
Its aspect is forlorn.

No longer is it viewed with awe,
A thing to see and prize;
We even doubt what once was law,
It sometimes tells us lies!
It leaves out words which should be there
And puts in letters, too!
I do not see how it can dare
To do so—now, do you?

It deals in horizontals long
And verticals as well;
It even spells out some words wrong;
You never can quite tell.
I'm all ashudder when I see
How on this prop I've leaned;
How insufficient it can be
To serve the Cross Word Fiend.

If more of us could have heard what Isaac McBride had to say at the Artists' Guild upon last Saturday night about the Russian pictures recently seen at the City Art Museum, there would be a much more widespread regret that we did not take a greater cognizance of that collection than we did. McBride has been to Russia regularly each year since 1918, and he is familiar with the condition of art over there. He says the artists sent this exhibition to America in the hope of selling some part of it at least for bread. They need bread as no artists have ever needed it. It is impossible for us, he says, to understand what Russian art seeks to express, since we have no conception of Russian life. Theirs has been a soul-stirring and centuries-old tragedy, and whatever laughter or pathos there is in Russian pictures, literature or music is rooted in that tragedy. The collection went from St. Louis to Kansas City.

Prohibition is likely to result in the sale of the Middlesex County Jail in Lowell, Mass. The building will probably be sold and the money turned into the county treasury. They probably never had anything in Middlesex better than persimmon beer, and the transition from that to pump water has not been very violent.

WHAT JACK BLANTON IS SAYING.

Monroe County (Mo.) Appeal.

The banking game originated in China. There has not been a bank failure in that great nation in 3000 years. Whether this is due to a finer sense of obligation on the part of pig-tailed officers and directors or to a law which imposes the death penalty for any act which causes loss to depositors, is a question. Benefit of the doubt should be given to the law and this country ought to give a try-out to a statute of that sort.

Another good-looking young woman, carrying a tambourine and wearing an imitation Salvation Army hat, cleaned Paris people of their surplus quarters and half dollars Saturday. "We are taking a Christmas offering and everyone must do his part," she blithely said. But who ever heard of the sort of army this girl claimed to represent? And wasn't she more interested in the Grand Army of Suckers than in the other contingent? Sometimes, when we see how hard it is to get coin in a legitimate way and how easily the public falls for outsiders who hatch plots against its purse, we wonder why anybody will go to the poorhouse when they could easily live in pomp and splendor by shaking the public down for linen dusters for the Eskimos, fur coats for the Hottentots or other causes of similar merit.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT.

From the Richmond Times-Democrat.

UNLESS all indications are at fault, the proposed child labor amendment to the Constitution of the United States will be rejected by the States. It should fail, of course, and for three conspicuous reasons. One is that it is contrary to the spirit of the Constitution that the Federal Government should regulate a matter so clearly and properly within the province of the several states. It is an opportunistic measure, after all, which has been inspired solely by the fact that a few of the states still persist in permitting the labor of children to be treated as a commodity. Their shields are stained by this course and there is no excuse for them. But the shame of a few states should not be permitted to serve as a lever with which to shift the Government of the United States, with its nice system of checks and balances, still further from its foundations. Another is that most of the states have adequate regulations on the subject of child labor already. Virginia, for example, which is not among the more paternalistic states, is so strict in its laws and in its enforcement of the laws that, when "Madama Butterfly" was sung here the other night, it was not permissible for the management of the company to place on the stage for about 10 minutes a plump, happy Japanese baby, who had nothing to do except sit on a cushion and wave two little flags. The third of the conspicuous reasons, and there are many others, is that the child labor amendment is only a so-called child labor amendment; it seeks to place under the control of Congress the labor of any and every person under 18 years of age. It's absurd.

THE FIFTH ESTATE.

ARTHUR D. LITTLE in Atlantic Monthly for December.

THIS Fifth Estate is composed of those having the simplicity to wonder, the ability to question, the power to generalize, the capacity to apply. It is, in short, the company of thinkers, workers, expounders and practitioners upon which the world is absolutely dependent for the preservation and advancement of that organized knowledge which we call Science. * * * It is they who bring the power and the fruits of knowledge to the multitude who are content to go through life without thinking and without questioning, who accept fire and the hatching of an egg, the attraction of a feather by a bit of amber, and the stars in their courses, as a fish accepts the ocean. * * * The curious deterioration to which words are subject has left us with no term in good repute and common usage by which the members of the Fifth Estate may properly be characterized. * * * Initiative is one of the rarest mental qualities, yet without it progress is impossible. Its combination with the scientific imagination and command of fact is still rarer and more precious. * * * Now vision, a trained intelligence, and an open mind are the qualities which characterize all those who are worthy of membership in the Fifth Estate. They are qualities which the many-sided Franklin possessed in exceptionally high degree. * * * It is not Labor, but the trained intelligence of the Fifth Estate which has endowed man with his present control of stupendous forces.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

IN Gilbert Emery's taut and clutching drama, "Tarnish," which completely captured a large audience last night at the Shubert-Jefferson, there is related the first collision of a chaste girl with that inexorable instinct implanted by nature in the male animal to insure the continuance of the race. Within a few hours there crash upon her proofs of masculine impurity in her employer, her own father and her lover. Thanks to a conventional rearing, these revelations provoke in her a shame and horror amounting to spiritual tragedy. This, by an ironical artifice, is set against the shallow revelry, the bells and frivolous uproar of a New Year's eve celebration.

Emmett Carr, a young attorney, proposes to Letitia Tevis and is accepted, at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Nothing would seem more improbable than that the sweethearts should accidentally meet, four hours later, in the disreputable apartment of that blonde and ruthless female of prey, Nettie Dark, who formerly had been Carr's mistress. Yet the playwright motivates this encounter with absolute address.

To begin with, Letitia is the daughter of a whimpering, selfish mother of aristocratic descent, and of a father who is a white-haired prodigal, scapegrace and Lothario. The valiant, resolute girl is the head of the family, but today she has been compelled to resign her job as stenographer for a law firm because of the dissolute importunities of one of the partners.

An Antique Gallant.

This is nothing compared with the news awaiting her at home. The family has a little income of $1000 a year, and the semi-annual check for $500 has arrived during the day. The mother, still doting on her husband, gives him the check to be cashed. Soon he comes staggering in, an ancient beau, with spats, boutonniere and walking stick. Letitia demands the money. He shuffles, bullies, cringes and lies. There has been an accident. A poor little girl—no, it was a boy—was struck by a taxicab, or rather a truck. While he was bending in tears over the bleeding form, some blackguard picked his pockets. Now he is penniless.

Letitia backs the sniveling old rogue into a corner and compels him to admit that he has given the money to a woman. It must be recovered, for the family faces starvation and dispossession. So Letitia extracts the name and address of the woman from a neighbor, Apolline Stutts, the rowdy bride of a bootlegger, and sets out for Nettie Park's apartment.

In the meantime Nettie, whom Carr has avoided since he fell in love with Letitia some months ago, lures him to her room by means of the strategem of having her friend, Aggie, telephone him that Nettie is in dire distress.

Hostile Feminine Types.

The triangular encounter gives rise to a scene of tense dramatic power. Here meet once more the two eternal feminine types—the mother-woman, guardian of the race's evolution, and the mistress-woman, whose sacrifice protects the other from the ravenous male instinct which would otherwise prey by violence upon her purity. Neither Letitia nor Nettie is conscious of their mutual biological functions, and they are enemies at sight. Nettie harshly refuses to part with a penny of old Adolph's money, and hisses out the fact that she and Carr have been lovers.

Finding her sweetheart in this sinister place, the rigid Letitia is struck with such loathing that she commands him never to see her again. His impassioned plea for forgiveness is repulsed; although he avers that the affair with Nettie really meant nothing, that he has not seen her for months, and that he will devote all the rest of his life faithfully to Letitia, she answers with poignant grief that in her eyes he is tarnished.

The playwright's belief in the double-standard of morals is shown by Carr's attitude. His own vagaries are to be pardoned as harmless peccadillos, but the very suspicion that Nettie has decoyed Letitia to her room for some unrighteous purpose, fills him with such rage that he flings himself upon Nettie and tries his best to choke her to death.

Filled With Abhorrence.

With three such experiences in one day, Letitia returns home in an abandon of revulsion against the very name of love. Her aversion is weakened and finally conquered by two women. One is no other than Nettie Dark, whom Carr drags in stormily to make her confess that she lied about their rendezvous at her room. Nettie upbraids her rival for narrowness and ignorance, and as a parting word of advice exclaims: "If I were in your shoes tonight, I'd take him with joy and hold him forever." Then there is that wise old termagant of a slavey, Mrs. Healy, who takes the girl to her bosom, and out of long experience delivers this verdict on the male of the species: "All men are bad. Yes, and they're dirty, too. The chief thing is to get one

Here meet once more the two eternal feminine types—the mother-woman, guardian of the race's evolution, and the mistress-woman, whose sacrifice protects the other from the ravenous male instinct which would otherwise prey by violence upon her purity. Neither Letitia nor Nettie has an inkling of their mutual biological functions, and they are enemies at sight. Nettie harshly refuses to part with a penny of old Adolph's money, and hisses out the fact that she and Carr have been lovers.

Finding her sweetheart in this sinister place, the rigid Letitia is struck with such loathing that she commands him never to see her again. Yes, and they're dirty, too. The chief thing is to get one that cleans easy." As the curtain is falling, Carr steals in and clasps Letitia's yielding hand.

Although this is the Chicago and not the New York cast, the eight characters, so ably sculptured by the author that you see not only their profiles but all around them, are most acceptably interpreted. Miss Tallaferro, with all her simple girlishness of method, builds up the role of Letitia to a fine climax of valor, tenderness and arresting emotional power. Easily on a level with the star's performance is Frederic March's Emmett Carr. He can utter a line like "You're killing me," and make you believe he means it; and his frenzied attack on Nettie at the end of the final act made a particularly thrilling curtain.

The Bootleggeress.

Clifford Dempsey could not readily be surpassed as old Tevis, particularly when he was lying clumsily, or pretending, in order to win sympathy from his wife and daughter, that he was dying of heart disease or about to cut his throat with a knife too dull to carve bread. Edith Shayne gives an admirable performance as Mrs. Tevis, and Grace Connell's bit as the bootlegger's spouse is a masterly piece of realism. We likewise admired Miss Benda's work as the steel-hard and rapacious manicure girl, who could still give $100 of her ill-gotten money to her sick friend, Aggie.

Despite its serious study of a social problem, this play abounds in comic touches and in amusing dialogue, usually couched in choicest Americanese. It may heartily be recommended not only as a good play but as good entertainment.

"Whispering Wires" Holds Empress Crowds With Its Trickery.

IN "Whispering Wires," as the Woodward Players present that—shall one say "electric"?—mystery play at the Empress this week, there is quite as much to enjoy as when a year ago a road company offered the same melodramatic fare at a downtown theater. The play is as much now as it was then. It could not be less. The presentation leaves little choice between the two companies.

It is enough to know that whispering wires warn of a murder to be done and that the murder is accomplished, although the home of the millionaire victim is surrounded by armed guards, and he is alone in the room from which he is shot to death by criminals who seek to avenge themselves upon him. His daughter, too, is a target for their hatred. How she is saved and the mystery solved needs no telling here. Nothing of genuine drama enters into this bit of stage carpentry. Wires are pulled and puppets dance through the thinnest and most unconvincing of plots. Yet the audience gasps and sometimes shrieks its dread, so compelling is the trickery.

Russian Act at Orpheum Brings Gorgeous Settings.

THERE is an extraordinarily mounted act this week at the Orpheum, given by a troupe of 30, who style themselves the Imperial Russian Players. As a setting, the skit uses the most lavish background ever seen at the Ninth street playhouse this season. There is an orchestra, directed by Philip Felz, which does not play particularly well; but the beautiful Vlasta Maslova is an admirable dancer, and Olga Kazanskaya is quite a skilled coloratura.

Among the numbers played, danced or sung are "Caucasian Sketches," "The Volga Boat Song," Saint-Saens' "The Swan," "Charmante Oiseau," "The Rosary," and the waltz-song from "The Merry Widow." An incident recalling the Chauve-Souris is a flirtation scene danced by Mlle. Maslova and Sasha Radnoff.

Frankie Heath, headliner, did not arrive in time for the opening matinee, and was replaced by a minstrel act borrowed from the Grand Opera House. She appeared in songs and impersonations on the evening bill.

A pair of acrobats who received applause such as these turns seldom win were two lads in their teens, the Ghezzi. The Keller sisters and Lynch have popular songs. Stuart Casey, highly diverting stage Englishman, appears with Mildred Warren in a playlet called, "The Fog." Walter and Emily Walters do a remarkable ventriloquist act, and Mario Lo and her company present an unusually attractive series of posed tableaux.

New Films

By NIE.

MORE and more is Loew's State Theater slipping into the position it was originally intended it should occupy—a vaudeville house with motion pictures subordinated to the stage attractions. This week, while the feature picture, "So This Is Marriage?" is a delightful one, there are three excellent acts on the bill and it is announced that next week Gilda Gray, one of the top-liners of the variesties, will be offered in a singing and dancing specialty. It would appear then, that Marcus Loew is getting back to his first love, perhaps gradually, but the fact that St. Louis is "overseated" in picture theaters and that each of the first-run movie houses has suffered greatly since the State came into the field is likely to cause some sort of readjustment of the amusement situation downtown. "So This Is Marriage?" is a good picture of the so-called "jazz" type with the customary story of a wife who wants to fox-trot—they are still fox-trotting aren't they?—and a husband who finds waltz time sufficiently speedy. There is the fox-trotting villain but there is also the usual baby who brings the husband and wife together, this time without dying. Conrad Nagel is the husband, Eleanor Boardman the wife and Lew Cody the other man. There are some splendid "cut backs" showing in color the love affair of King David and the wife of Uriah, the Hittite. Mr. Uriah, it may be remembered by Biblical students, was sent into the front-line trenches by David while Mrs. Uriah remained behind to entertain the King. The analogy drawn between what happened to Mrs. Uriah's baby and what might happen to the modern jazz wife's child brings about the usual happy ending.

Gadzooks and S'Death.

RAFAEL SABATINI, who turns out romances while the reading public waits and while scenario writers and camera men stand by is the author of the swashbuckling melodrama of the sea, "Captain Blood," which is on view at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol. The story is of an age when gentlemen were gentlemen even when they were pirates and Peter Blood, a physician in Merrie England, was the most gentlemanly of them all, for when he became a highwayman on the Spanish Main he bowed low to the ladies with a great flourish of his long plumed hat and never scuttled an English ship except in cases of dire necessity. "Captain Blood" is really a better picture play than the same author's "The Sea Hawk," but coming so soon after that film drama, and being somewhat similar in plot, it will hardly attain the same popularity. There are some magnificent sea scenes in this present romance and some stirring battles between many ships and J. Warren Kerrigan, who is equally at home sailing a prairie schooner across the wide open spaces, as he did in "The Covered Wagon," or sailing a captured Spanish treasure galleon through the Carribean, just off the coast of Los Angeles, is a picturesque and thoroughly lovable Dr. Blood, who comes into his just reward in the shape—and a very pretty shape it is, too—of the daughter of the irritable old Governor of the West Indies, and also gets his prospective father-in-law's job. Jean Paige is the heroine. The picture is well made and furnishes very pleasing and exciting entertainment.

Bebe Daniels Comes Back.

BEBE DANIELS, who used to be a star and then dropped out of the electric lights for a while, is back at the top of the cast in "Dangerous Money" at the Kings this week. Somebody who had Bebe's welfare very much at heart picked out a good vehicle for her comeback for "Dangerous Money," is a thoroughly enjoyable comedy drama and the star romps through just the sort of a part which appeals to the larger part of the customers of the movie theaters. At no time is the intelligence of those audiences put to any great strain, but also it is not insulted and the result is pleasing enough. Bebe has the role of a poor girl who suddenly comes into a lot of money which, in the movies, always means trouble. She goes to Paris, gets mixed up with a lot of bogus noblemen and marries one of them just before the sweetheart of her days of poverty arrives to save her. A convenient fire, however, does the trick and Bebe is a widow and in a fair way to remarry the man the picture fans picked out for her in the first reel when the play ends.

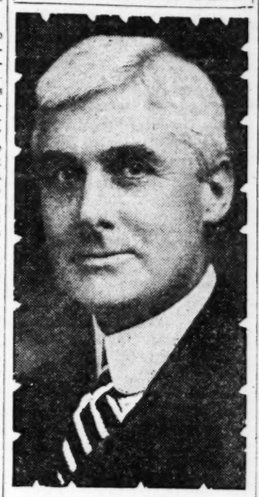

Virtue Again Is Rewarded.

A POOR GIRL—a little product of the slums who stitches away on her sewing machine in French heels and a permanent wave on the lower East Side of New York—is the heroine also of "Manhattan" at the Missouri Theater. Richard Dix is the wealthy Prince Charming who tires of life in high society, takes a lesson or two in boxing and goes down into Hell's Kitchen and beats up most of the gunmen in that part of town, taking them on single handed or in dozens as necessity demands, and finally snatches the good little poor girl from her machine and wicked companions and lands her in his mansion on Fifth avenue. Jacqueline Logan is very charming as the girl and the story, which is not nearly as far fetched as it sounds, makes a good, fast moving drama. Among the attractions also on the Missouri's bill is "Smiling Harry" Philwin, a blind world war veteran, who sings very well, indeed, and a Mack Sennett comedy with plenty of laughs.

The Cop a Hero.

AT LAST the lowly policeman has become a hero. He is held up as a romantic, fearless man and the model for all youths in "East of Broadway," based on the story, "The Tropic of Capricon," starring Owen Moore at the Del Monte this week. Certainly "the finest" never seemed finer than in this film, which was made with the aid of Chief O'Brien and the San Francisco department. Owen Moore, as Peter Mullaney, lived only for the moment when he would "get on the cops." After many tribulations he is accepted pending a written examination. Then he failed because he didn't know his geography. On his last night as a probationer he captures two robbers after his walking partner is slain and for his bravery wins his shield and a girl, too. The role shows Moore to an advantage as a two-fisted, fighting Irishman, and his cast, including Mary Carr, Ralph Lewis and Marguerite de la Motte, is above the average. Andy Gump, with Chester and Min, breaks into the movies chasing jumping beans, but hardly makes a thud. There are two vaudeville acts on the program.

IRMA GOEBEL MAKES DEBUT WITH SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Displays Surprising and Almost Masculine Power in Piano Numbers at Pop Concert.

Thoroughly routined is the pianism of Irma Goebel, soloist of yesterday's popular concert at the Odeon. A surprising and almost masculine power leaped from her fingers in the Weber Concertstueck for pianoforte and orchestra, with which that young artist from Urbana, Ill., made her debut with the St. Louis orchestra. "Honest" and "solid" were the epithets one found. But brilliance and subtlety were scarcely manifest. In their stead was a romantic sentimentality, shown also in the contrasting C-sharp minor nocturne of Chopin which Miss Goebel proffered as an encore number.

But brilliance was manifest in the orchestral tone during the concert, and Mr. Ganz's band has not on many occasions given a finer response. A lifting and lambent tone, smooth, full and rounded, expressed itself with grace and delicacy in Flotow's overture to "Allesandro Stradella" and in Beethoven's Minuet and "Turkish March" which with the Brahms Fifth Hungarian Dance as an encore, preceded the soloist.

It was a program of brilliant melodies and in singing those melodies the string choirs and woodwind gave a fine account of themselves. Godard's "Adagio Pathetique," though not of great significance, won a warm welcome from the audience, and Thomas' "Mignon" gavotte was an extra number. Followed the "Blue Danube" waltz and Grieg's "Coronation March" from the "Sigurd Jorsalfar" suite to bring the program to an end.

CLIFTON R. SCUDDER FUNERAL TOMMOROW

President of Samuel Cupples Envelope Co. Died at 62 Following Operation.

The funeral of Clifton R. Scudder, 62 years old, president of the Samuel Cupples Envelope Co., who died last night at St. Luke's Hospital, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from the Church of the Holy Communion, 2800 Washington boulevard, to Bellefontaine Cemetery. He was operated on two weeks ago for an intestinal trouble and never recovered from the effects of the operation.

His father, the late Charles Scudder, was active in Republican politics, serving two terms each as City Treasurer and Public Administrator in the period from 1884 to 1900.

Clifton Scudder was born and reared in St. Louis starting his business career with Guernsey, Jones & Co., furniture dealers, in 1876. He resigned as treasurer of the company 10 years later to become vice president and treasurer of the St. Louis Electric Light and Power Co. He remained with the latter concern until 1896, when he became connected with the Cupples Envelope Co., now at 628 South Sixth street. Twenty-five years ago he was made vice president and treasurer of the company and was elected to the presidency several years ago.

WRIGLEY CO. LOSES BIG SUIT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—A 13-years' controversy over the color scheme once used by the William Wrigley Jr. company on one kind of its chewing gum, in which Federal Judge Wilkerson today gave an award of $1,471,000 to the L. T. Larson Jr. Co., is not ended yet. The Wrigley company will appeal.

William Wrigley Jr., president of the Wrigley company, explained that the award gives him no concern as the sum is less than 10 per cent of the company's surplus. A master in chancery calculated profits of the Wrigley company during the period when the disputed color scheme was used, at $2,860,083 which, with 6 per cent interest, would have amounted to about $4,000,000, but Judge Wilkerson reduced the figure to $1,471,000.

ST. LOUISAN KILLED UNDER TRAIN AT SPRINGFIELD, MO.

George M. Hartzog, Victim, Was Arrested as Suspect After the Shooting of Michael Kinney.

George M. Hartzog, 39 years old, of 153 Louisa street, a car builder, was killed under the wheels of an outbound freight train at Springfield, Mo., yesterday afternoon. The severed body was found two hours later by a Frisco switchman. In the man's pockets was found a note stating that he had a wife at the Louisa street address and a mother at Litchfield, Ill.

Hartzog, it will be recalled, was arrested by authorities at Liberty, Mo., following the shooting and wounding of State Senator Michael Kinney by an unidentified assailant, as Kinney was waiting for a Missouri-Pacific train at Oakland station, on a morning early last June. Hartzog was arrested on a description and talked incoherently of the Kinney shooting, saying the Senator was shot "because he did not sign the bonds." City detectives visited the suspect at Liberty, but a physician gave it as his opinion the man was mentally deranged from excessive drinking and his statements were irresponsible. He was released.

At the time, the wife, who conducts a boarding house at the Louisa street number, recounted that they had been married, divorced and remarried. They have one child—a boy, 8 years old.

CONFLICTING STORIES ON SHOOTING OF YOUTH

Son of Restaurant Owner Takes Responsibility But Wounded Man Makes Denial.

Thomas Kiely, 18 years old, who lives with his mother at 2300 Benton street, is in a serious condition at Mullanphy Hospital from a bullet wound in the left breast, which he said was inflicted by a highwayman whom he resisted at 1:30 a. m. yesterday, near Twenty-third street and Cass avenue.

While investigating the shooting police heard that Kiely had been shot in a restaurant at 2612 Cass avenue. Louis Bobbe, owner of the restaurant, and his son, Benjamin, told the police that Kiely and six other youths ate at the restaurant at 1:30 a. m. yesterday and started to leave without paying the check. The elder Bobbe said he demanded that the check be paid, whereupon Kiely drew a revolver and said, "Here is your money."

Taking this action as a possible attempt to hold up the place, Benjamin Bobbe, the son, seized a revolver from under the counter and shot Kiely, whose companions dragged the wounded youth from the place, according to the Bobbes.

Benjamin Bobbe declared there could be no mistake in the identification of Kiely, whom he has known for seven years, and at the hospital Bobbe confronted Kiely and accepted responsibility for the shooting.

Kiely denied that Bobbe shot him and declared he was not acquainted with Bobbe. Police tried today to get a warrant charging attempted robbery against Kiely, but it was refused by Assistant Circuit Attorney Fish who ruled the evidence was insufficient. The Bobbes are under bond pending the outcome of Kiely's injuries.

Why This Picture Is Printed

THESE men are leading citizens of El Paso, Texas. They do not ordinarily allow their pictures to be printed in advertisements. But they have a tremendously important message for every man, woman or child in the United States who has weak lungs, or fears tuberculosis. It is this:

Every one of these men (and there are hundreds more) came to El Paso to fight tuberculosis. And they won—won so gloriously that they are proud to tell the story.

They attribute their return to robust good health primarily to the dry air, long days of sunshine and year round outdoor life to be had in this city.

The Gateway Club (a non-commercial body with nothing to sell) has prepared a booklet "Filling the Sunshine Prescription" giving details about the climate here. It is free. If you, or anyone you know, is suffering from tuberculosis, you should get a copy of this booklet immediately. The edition is limited. Use coupon.

ACCOMPLICE IN FATAL HOLDUP OF SALOON STILL AT LARGE

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Dec. 8.—Police today had found no trace of the unidentified robber, who late Saturday accompanied Raymond L. Mosely of Boston, Mass., shot and killed two men and wounded five others during a holdup of a saloon here.

Mosely, who is in a serious condition in a local hospital as a result of being struck by a sledge hammer by one of his victims, is unable to make a statement. Police, however, declare Mosely did all the shooting, his companion having been unarmed.

A Sheriff's posse, accompanied by local police, searched the countryside in an effort to find a trace of the fugitive, who was last seen in a field west of South Bend.

C. L. Camp, farmer, is in a serious condition at a local hospital. The others are only slightly wounded.

BISHOP BRENT CALLS OPIUM TREATY FRAUD

GENEVA, Dec. 8.—Bishop Charles H. Brent, before departing for Paris and London to confer with Premier Herriot and the Archbishop of Canterbury, addressed a circular to the League of Nations and the opium conference, bitterly assailing the treaty just completed whereby opium smoking is legalized and made a Government monopoly in Oriental possessions.

He cited his inability to address the plenary session because of his departure and declared he had made his last appearance at the international conference against narcotics, in which he opened the fight years ago.

Action, which will be taken by Representative Porter this week is certain to meet the combined resistance of Great Britain, India, Holland, Portugal and other pro-opium smoking governments. The British declare they have reached the limit of their concessions.

Conditions in Philippines.

Threat is secretly made to disclose conditions in the Philippines which Americans are said to be either unaware of or covering up.

"A calamity of extraordinary proportions is facing humanity," Bishop Brent said in attacking the treaty. "The pact forces the United States to fall back upon reservations reluctantly raised in the second conference. We hope at the eleventh hour to save both ourselves and the signatories."

He analyzed each of the 15 articles and called the entire document a hesitating step, uncompulsory and a hazardous expedient. He charged the signatories did not desire to restrict opium smoking.

"Substitution of the word divan merely gives an honorific euphonius title to dive or den," he said. "It is like polishing a base metal to make it gold."

Clause Nullifies Whole.

Regarding Article 7, which requires the signatories to undertake propaganda against opium, Bishop Brent stressed the clause, "except when a government considers such measures undesirable under existing conditions," saying it nullified the whole.

The article is as fine a piece of hedging as any gambler ever employed at the track," he said, adding it was trifling with principles and playing with language in solemn covenant.

Article 4, regarding licensing and rationing, he charged as a bleached skeleton or a bundle of bones without body, a tree without sap. The article as it reads merely asks the signatories to furnish available inforamtion regarding the number of smokers.

Makes Plea for China.

The Bishop made a powerful plea to the Powers to assist China, which alone did not sign the document. He submitted a constructive program which he asked the conference to accept and concluded:

"The tremendous machinery of the Lague's Advisory Committee, council, assembly and the international conference was called to deal with opium, but the results are like calling a steam hammer to split rock and then cracking a walnut with it. Unless something is done, color will be given to the charges that the Western nations are callous toward the welfare of Eastern possessions and have one law for the protection of ourselves and another for exploitation of others."

"EXCLUSION ACT A CHAPTER IN WINNING JAPAN FOR CHRIST"

Missionary, Speaking Here, Says It Did More Damage Than Earthquake to Morale of People.

Describing the Japanese earthquake, Sept. 1, 1923, as one of the "tragic chapters" in "winning Japan for Christ," the Rev. William Axling, for 23 years a missionary in Japan, addressed the congregation of the Second Baptist Church yesterday morning and preached at the Third Baptist Church last night.

The second "tragic chapter," which shattered Japanese morale more than the earthquake," was the exclusion act, the missionary declared. "It is a challenge to their civilization, to their progress and to their equality as a nation," he said. America hitherto has been the champion of the oppressed. Now shall it be Christ or color."

INQUIRY INTO MAN'S DEATH FROM FRACTURED SKULL

Roman Kemnetz, 55, Was Found Lying on Sidewalk Saturday Night.

Police are investigating the case of Roman Kemnetz, 55 years old, of 1804 North Jefferson avenue, who died early yesterday at City Hospital of a fractured skull. He was found lying on the sidewalk at Ewing and Franklin avenues at 9 p. m. Saturday.

Taken to City Hospital he was treated for alcoholism and placed in the alcoholic ward. Four hours after being admitted to the hospital, an attendant discovered blood on his pillow and an X-ray picture disclosed the skull fracture. The patient died a few minutes later. Police have not established whether he was slugged or suffered the skull fracture in a fall. They are inclined to the latter theory.

BEN MILLERS WIN AND INCREASE THEIR LEAD IN SOCCER LEAGUE RACE

Bethlehem and Fall River Elevens Likely to Play in Holiday Exhibitions Here

Boston Club, Leading Eastern League, Wants Too Large a Guarantee — Vespers Defeated, 2-1, and Scullins Trim Raticans by Similar Score.

By Dent McSkimming.

Having decisively defeated all rivals in the St. Louis Soccer League race, the Ben Millers, with a lead of two and one-half games, are now so far out in front that they have forced league officials to turn attention to out-of-town attractions in the hope of stimulating local interest. The Millers yesterday defeated the Vespers, 2 to 1, and obtained a lead of three full games over the local champions. Only 2000 persons attended the league double-header.

Phil Riley, treasurer of the local league and chairman of the Games Committee, today announced that he had received favorable replies from his offers to Bethlehem, Fall River and the New York Giants of the American Soccer League, for exhibition games here during the Christmas holidays.

The Boston club, which is also sought because of the fact that it is leading the Eastern League and is composed of newly imported British stars, has asked for such a high financial guarantee that it is unlikely that the local management will continue negotiations.

There is little doubt that Bethlehem will be seen here on Dec. 27 and 28, the Saturday and Sunday following Christmas. Fall River is the most probable selection for New Year's day and Jan. 3 and 4.

Lineups Rearranged.

Good reserve material enabled both the Ben Millers and the Vespers to put strong teams on the field in spite of the absence of two forwards who had been prominent fixtures. Joe McCarthy, who has joined the Indiana Club of New York, was replaced by Tracy, with Corrigan at center, and for the Millers, Curran played at outside right in the absence of Eddie Dunn, who is injured. Both Tracy and Curran were prominent in the scoring of goals.

Although weather conditions were very trying, rain and darkness reducing the action to a hit-or-miss rushing game, the competition was remarkably keen. Mulroy and Curran of the Millers were injured, Mulroy being forced to retire from the game. Fink of the Vespers was severely used but remained at his task. The Miller forwards appeared to be incensed at what they believed to be unnecessary roughness on the part of Fullback Scott, and they hurtled into him at every opportunity. Scott was booting with great strength and Fullback Joe Hand was also very effective.

When Scott put Mulroy out of the game by kicking him above the knee, the Miller players crowded about him, and under cover of darkness a few blows were swung. The crowd surged over the lines and the game was interrupted for three minutes. No visible damage was done and no one was ejected by the referee. Most of the confusion, it appeared, was caused by spectators.

Millers Show Scoring Power

Although the Vespers had the better of the play in general, holding the ball in front of the Miller goal mouth for the greater part of the second half, the Millers in their characteristic fashion, registered two goals on the very slightest openings. Leo Fitzgerald scored both although on each occasion he obtained his opportunity through the generous and clever work of Center Jimmy Dunn. Dunn's willingness to give the ball to any man who has a better avenue to the goal, is largely responsible for many of the Miller goals this season.

George Corrigan scored for the Vespers in the second half on a cross from Tracy and nothing but wonderful goal guarding by Dave Bartnett prevented a tie or a Vesper victory. On one occision, in trying to save a tight situation, a Ben Miller back drove the ball against his own goal posts.

Schweppe, at center halfback for the Millers, was one of the strongest factors in the defense and the kicking of Vaughn and Erbe was always good.

Raticans Nearly Gain Tie.

In the first game, the Ratican team narrowly missed a tie with the Scullins. Jim Burke, scored twice for Tate Brady's team and Slattery counted for the Raticans. The final score was 2 to 1. In the second half, the Raticans were awarded a penalty kick when Halfback Schurwan handled the ball in the restricted area, and Halfback Hensick, who attempted the free kick, drove high over the bar.

Both goals scored on Oellerman were tinged with luck. He had the ball in his hands on both occasions and should have prevented both scores. However, he prevented many other good shots from hitting the net.

STAGG TO REPRESENT BIG TEN AT MEETING

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—With the selection of Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago to be their representative at the annual meeting of the National Association of Football Coaches in New York, Dec. 29, Western Conference mentors, athletic directors and faculty representatives departed with 1925 sport schedules ready for the inspection of their followers.

JOHNNY WILSON

Former middleweight champion, who is making an attempt to come back. He meets Tiger Flower, Georgia negro boxer, tomorrow night at New York.

Six Intercity Matches Assured

Amateur Boxing Show Thursday Night Will Provide Test for Local Talent.

St. Louis boxing enthusiasts will have an opportunity next Thursday night at the Coliseum to see how local amateur stars compare with ringsters from other sections of the country at a show to be held by the Business Men's A. C. Six events between boxers from outside St. Louis and local fighters have been arranged by Matchmakers Cook and Solari. The card will include many preliminary contests between local boxers.

A flyweight duel in which Mike Sansone of the Business Men's Club, Western A. A. U. titleholder, meets Don Manson of Pittsburg, Pa., looms as the headliner. Manson was a finalist in the last tournament of the Allegheny Mountain Association of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Billy Sincoff of the National A. A. meets Carl Kinney of the Kansas City A. C. in one of three matches featuring 125-pounders. Kinney, a Western A. A. U. champion, is the boxer who defeated Walter Rowlands of this city in a district championship tournament several months ago.

Goldberg Meets Hunt.

Eddie Goldberg of the National A. A. meets Theodore Hunt of Indianapolis, Ind., in another featherweight bout. In two years, in local rings, Goldberg has scored 12 consecutive victories. Hunt was runner-up in the last Indianapolis tournament.

The third featherweight feature will bring together Louis Terry of the South Broadway A. C. and Charles Flasher, Wilmerding Y. M. C. A., Erie, Pa.

Eddie Kaiser, brother of "Peewee" Kaiser, will battle Lawrence Pruitt of Indianapolis in a special bantam event. Pruitt is Indiana-Kentucky and Middle States bantamweight champion, according to records supplied by George W. Lipps, physical director of the Hoosier A. C.

Tunney Meets Smith.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 8.—Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., veteran boxer, who for 14 years has been trailing champions for a title bout, will have his wish gratified when he enters the ring tonight at the Coliseum with Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, in a scheduled 15-round no-decison set-to.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Oh Look!

THE fight season waxes. Many promising encounters are "on the iron," and not all of them are to take place in the ring world. We may suggest as a sort of all-America fight schedule, the following rip-roaring events which many expect to mature in the near future:

Jack Dempsey vs. Tom Gibbons.
Mickey Walker vs. the New York Boxing Commission.
Tom Cahill vs. Peter J. Peel.
Wayne Wheeler vs. John Barleycorn.
Bill Schumacher vs. Bill Yorger.
St. Louis vs. the Smoke nuisance.

* * *

No Chance to Win.

THERE are many others, but these will hold the country for a while. In the meanwhile the fiercest battle of all is being waged, with no finish in sight.

In this fight Kid Savings Account is waging a lone-handed struggle against the H. C. of L., the landlord, Santa Claus and the auto-repair man.

The Kid has kissed the canvas several times, but still is battling gamely. He hopes to stick it out through Round Twelve, of 1924.

* * *

Johnson Beat Fitz.

J. F.—Yes, Jack Johnson and Bob Fitzsimmons fought. Johnson knocked out Fitzsimmons in the second round of their fight at Philadelphia, July 17, 1907. At that time Fitzsimmons was 47 years old and had been beaten out of the championship nine years before, by Jim Jeffries.

* * *

It Never Happens.

THAT Johnson-Landis fight, by the way, is always "going to happen," but never comes off.

Out of New York comes the astounding word that Landis won't have to fight Johnson; that Ban's own league is going to knock him down and kick him in the ribs by ratifying a league indorsement of Landis himself.

If such a disaster were to happen the football upsets of the season past would appear formful by comparison.

That the American's club owners will ever openly affront the man who made the league a major organization, who was responsible for practically all the advancement and cleaning up of the game, whose footsteps were followed by the National League in progressive moves, like an Airedale follows his master, who dug down in his own pocket to tide over the fortunes of at least two financially wrecked magnates and thereby restored the clubs to their feet and to subsequent fortune, is inconceivable.

Even Clark Griffith, who was once under personal obligations to Johnson for aid in time of stress, would not so humiliate the one-time master mind of the game, granting that Griff believed Ban had "boobed it up" during the recent world's series.

* * *

League Still Seems Johnsonian.

It is a good bet that no indorsement of Landis will be brought up at the American League's meeting. It is even probable that all the fight talk will simmer down to mere words.

* * *

Passing of Turkey Day.

THANKSGIVING day, once the climax and the close of the college football season, is now just a fade-out in the gridiron reel.

Missouri and Kansas, that for more than 20 years struggled on this occasion, have abandoned the time-honored date for the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Practically all conferences now complete their seasons before Thanksgiving and the date which once marked the close of the season today really is featured only by post-season contests.

* * *

Season Is Extending.

THE post-season idea is growing. Once Turkey day was the hard-and-fast closing date for college football. In late years post-Thanksgiving contests annually have increased in number until today the actual end of intersectional football is New Year's day.

This year the holidays will see three big games on the Pacific Coast, not to mention others in Southern sections of the country and in Cuba.

The desire to spend the Thanksgiving holidays at home with the family and the turkey, and the opposition of patriotic and religious folk have played a big part in the passing of Thanksgiving day as the climax and the close of the grid campaign.

* * *

The Amateur's Problem.

BOB PROBST, Doctor C. M. Westerman and the members of the A. A. U. committee have come to the rescue of the harried boxing amateur.

Everywhere he boxes the amateur is given a watch or a medal. He might embark in the jewelry business with the output, but for lack of variety and a tendency on the part of the trophies to turn green, after a time.

The new commission has embarked on new seas. Upon Dr. Westerman's suggestion the prizes at the coming amateur tournament at the Coliseum will include mantel clocks, tea sets, one leg on a dinner service, silver salvers and other articles of real utility.

A good boxer in time can thus acquire, piece by piece, a solid silver table service calculated to carry his mother through any sort of a table function, starting with silver soup ladles and ending with solid silver nut picks.

* * *

It sounds odd, but it is common sense. What in the world any lad wants with a trunk full of watches is more than mortal can understand—unless they have a cash turn-in value, as has been insinuated in some instances.

The new committee is out to clean house and make the game whiter than snow. The silver service route seems one way of keeping the boys interested, without offering them the prohibited cash reward.

Six Veterans Give Central the Edge In Basketball

Mid-City High School Team Shows Strength—Two Fives Lack Practice Floors.

Central is most fortunate in the matter of veteran material as practice for the High School League basketball season opens. The Mid-City school has six lettermen from last year's squad. Yeatman and McKinley each have four, Soldan three and Cleveland is last, with only two.

It was evidenced in Central's first practice game last Friday that Cristal, Connors, Cameron, Hunt, Brown and Kies will be a hard combination to stop. Cristal has developed an uncanny accuracy in shooting. This lad played a fine game last week. Hunt will be a regular guard this year. Brown and Kies are being tried out at this position, but whether they will fill the vacancy is not known.

Besides these regulars, Coach Callan has Armstrong, Gale, Hossler and McCready as reliable substitutes.

Soldan Stars Ineligible.

Coach White, at Soldan, finds the eligibility ruling a problem to solve, as six men of last year's squad will be ineligible until the end of this term. Layman, Washburn and Hassler are the only regulars of last year who will start the present season. Ritter, Robinson, Christensen, Hemker, Woods and Fleischman are among the ineligibles.

Layman played center last year, while Washburn and Hassler played at forward and guard, respectively. Post, who played on the football team this year, looks as if he will make the grade.

Although McKinley and Yeatman seem to be fairly well situated, with four regulars, the absence of a suitable gym will seriously handicap these two schools. Yeatman has the use of Battery "A" two afternoons a week and McKinley has it one afternoon. McKinley can practice onl ytwo days in their home gym, so it will be a difficult job for Coach Carlson to put out a championship team.

Yeatman Captain Back.

Capt. Layton leads the Yeatman basketeers this year. Those who were with him last year are Ens, Randall and Spering. Capt. Layton and Spering held down the forwards, Ens jumps at center and Randall is a guard. However, Heideman, Dreyman and Keller saw experience with the second team last year, and they will make strong bids for places on the first team in the coming season. Blumenkamp, Thiele, Powell and Fredrickson appear the best of the newcomers. Coach Lewis' squad meets Principia next Saturday afternoon at 2:30, on Principia's floor.

For McKinley, Bickle, a forward; Antrobius, center, and Wise and Hubell, guards, are leftovers from last year's team. Among the youngsters, Beck and Metzker, two forwards, seem to have much ability. McKinley plays Kenrick Friday at 3:30, at Battery "A."

Schumacher to Resist Effort To Oust Teams

The efforts of the Director of Public Recreation, William F. Yorger, to suspend from Municipal athletics the managers and backers of the soccer teams forming Group One at Carondelet Park are apt to precipitate a legal battle. William Schumacher, sponsor of the Schumacher team in Group One, said this morning that he had retained Oscar Moberg as his attorney for the purpose of combating any attempt on the part of Yorger to suspend the directors of the affected teams.

Yorger last week issued an order to the Group One teams, directing them to play their games as scheduled on Grounds Two or stand suspended. The teams in this group, the Schumachers, Smiths, De Pauls and Chippewa-Broadway Business Men's Association, have refused to play on Grounds Two because, they contend, they are not of regulation dimensions and because they claim to have priority rights to Grounds One.

William Schumacher, in speaking for the teams of Group One, said this morning that he questioned the right of Yorger to suspend anyone "in his high-handed, autocratic fashion, without the formality of a hearing before the executive committee."

Did Not Answer Letters.

"We have directed two written requests to Yorger," said Schumacher, "asking him to grant us the courtesy of a hearing by the committee. He has never granted our request nor answered our communications. We have played on Grounds One for six years and believed we should have the right to remain there. Some of the clubs of Group Two are using players who are not United States citizens and we do not understand why we should be asked to move off our grounds to accommodate them."

Landis-Johnson Clash Expected At Joint Session

Landis' Wife Ill; He Doesn't Know If He Can Attend Meet

By the Associated Press.

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 8. JUDGE K. M. LANDIS, baseball commissioner, told the Associated Press late today that he would not decide whether he could attend the baseball meeting in New York Thursday until he had received the report of the Mayo clinic on the condition of Mrs. Landis, whom he brought here today.

"Mrs. Landis is here for examination at the Mayo clinic," the baseball commissioner said, "and I must await the physician's report before deciding definitely whether I can go. If I go, I will have to leave here tomorrow evening."

Neither Judge Landis nor the hospital authorities would give any information concerning the nature of Mrs. Landis' illness, but a report from the clinic on her case is expected by tomorrow afternoon. If her condition is not serious Judge Landis will leave for New York.

By John B. Foster.

(Copyright, 1924.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Three baseball meetings in New York this week have their possibilities of oratorical effect, wire pulling, and, maybe, mischief. They may affect the players of the game, not with reference to their playing of the game on the field, but with reference to their control.

The first of the three meetings is that of the National League on Tuesday. This is expected to be a placid affair, resulting in the reelection of John A. Heydler as president. The rumored opposition to him, if there really was any, has disappeared. The rest of the National meeting should be largely routine.

The American League meeting gives promise of more excitement. Re-election of the board of directors and the vice presidents are the principal items on the formal program, President Ban Johnson having some years yet to serve. The excitement, if it breaks, will come when Johnson begins to spread before the organization such evidence as he may have about gambling on the Pacific Coast. He has been cited to render this information before an authority constituted to hear it and probably feels that it is his first duty to relate to his own league any information that he may possess. If such information does go before the American League Wednesday, it may follow into the joint session of the major leagues Thursday.

Minors Indorsed Landis.

The indorsement of the administration of Commissioner Landis by the National Association indirectly included a severe arraignment of someone who was not mentioned by name, but who, of course, was Johnson. This has provoked animosity and bitter words.

The passing of a resolution calling upon Johnson to give evidence in regard to gambling on the Pacific Coast was so worded that Judge Landis may take it up and ask Johnson at the joint meeting to give any such information as he may possess. That will touch off the fireworks. It has been asserted that the commissioner had men on the coast investigating the gambling charges.

If Johnson, after he has put his evidence before the American League should decline to go further with it there might follow a jam in baseball which would be in line with previous eruptions in the sport.

In Chicago last year Judge Landis directed a personal attack against Johnson. The enemies of the American League president are hoping that another will follow this year. However, the efforts of the American League president to establish the honesty of baseball, cannot be questioned, because Judge Landis himself, testifying in the Milwaukee case to obtain redress for punished black sheep, asserted that Johnson had been foremost in turning up the Chicago scandal in the American League.

These Are Grown Men.

The personal issue between the Commissioner and the American League president seems to be the latter's unwillingness to be relegated to the status of office boy for his own league.

Judge Landis was criticised at the time of the O'Connell-Dolan episode for not taking the public more into his confidence. Johnson is said to have criticised him, too. Now the others who criticised the Commissioner for what they said he did not do are criticising Johnson for criticising the Commissioner which probably is the height of baseball bouffe in recent years.

The excitement, if it breaks, will come when Johnson begins to spread before the organization such evidence as he may have about gambling on the Pacific Coast. He has been cited to render this information before an authority constituted to hear it and probably feels that it is his first duty to refer to his own league any information that he may possess. If such information does go before the American League Wednesday, it may follow into the joint session of the major leagues Thursday.

Minors Indorsed Landis.

The indorsement of the administration of Commissioner Landis by the National Association indirectly included a severe arraignment of someone who was not mentioned by name, but who, of course, was Johnson. This has provoked animosity and bitter words.

The passing of a resolution calling upon Johnson to give evidence in regard to gambling on the Pacific Coast was so worded that Judge Landis may take it up and call Johnson at the joint meeting to give any such information as he may possess. That will touch off the fireworks. It has been asserted that the commissioner had men on the coast investigating the gambling charges.

If Johnson, after he has put his evidence before the American League should decline to go further with it there might follow a jam in baseball which would be in line with previous eruptions in the sport.

In Chicago last year Judge Landis directed a personal attack against Johnson. The enemies of the American League president are hoping that another will follow this year. However, the efforts of the American League president to establish the honesty of baseball, cannot be questioned, because Judge Landis himself, testifying in the Milwaukee case to obtain release for punished black sheep, asserted that Johnson had been foremost in turning up the Chicago scandal in the American League.

These Are Grown Men.

The personal issue between the commissioner and the American League president seems to be the latter's unwillingness to be relegated to the status of office boy for his own league.

Judge Landis was criticised at the time of the O'Connell-Dolan episode for not taking the public more into his confidence. Johnson is said to have criticised him, too, as have the others who criticised the commissioner for what they said he did not do are criticising Johnson for criticising the Commissioner which probably is the height of baseball bouffe in recent years.

St. Louis Bowler Still Leads On Last Day of Mid-West Race

C. F. Kaley, With Total of 1920, Is Expected to Win the "All-Events."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 8.—With the annual Middle West Bowling Association tournament scheduled to close today, St. Louis still has a chance to land one championship. This is in the all-events in which Clarence F. Kaley of the Majestic Garden quintet is showing the way with 1920. Only 36 tenpinners are scheduled to bowl today in an effort to beat this mark.

Kaley established his mark the first week of the tournament and such stars as Jimmy Blouin and Jimmy Smith, regarded as the two leading bowlers in the country, failed to better it. Smith, who rolled yesterday, failed to by six pins to reach Kaley's mark, finishing with 1914.

St. Louis led in the individuals until yesterday, when W. Woll of Milwaukee rolled 698, replacing Phil Pitts, who for some time had been the pace maker, with 688.

In the five-man event completed yesterday, six St. Louis teams landed in the money, with the Majestic Gardens landing seventh with 2874 and taking down $135. The other St. Louis winners in the five-man event were the Wooster Lambers $65; Piggly Wigglys, $60; United Bakers, $45; C. C. Petersons, $35, and Trumbulls, $35.

C. F. KALEY.

The Oh Henry team of Chicago with a total of 3000 won the team championship, with the St. Francis team of St. Paul finishing in second place with 2930.

Nurmi to Run in Two Races Jan. 6

Finnish Marvel Will Oppose Americans in Mile and 5000 Metre Events.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—American track and field followers will see probably the greatest running machine of all time in action during the 1924-25 indoor season when Paavo Nurmi, Finnish marvel who is due here this week, meets the pick of American runners in a series of meets in the East. His plans also contemplate a possible invasion of tracks in the Middle West and Canada.

Nurmi, whose Olympic conquests last July at Paris and amazing streak of record-breaking performances are well known wherever the cinder path sport is followed, comes here at the height of his career. Only 26 years old, this Finnish star holds 10 world's records at distances ranging from 1500 meters to seven miles and over the past two years, has flashed a consistent brand of speed that has given him an unprecedented place in athletic annals.

His first competition is slated for Jan. 6 at Madison Square Garden, where under the auspices of the Finnish-American Athletic Club, he will run in two races, one at a mile and another at 5000 meters. In attempting this feat, Nurmi will be duplicating the task he set for himself at Paris, when, in a single afternoon, he won the Olympic 1500 and 5000 meter races, both in record time.

Billikens Invite Big Ten Team Here

Prospects Reported Good for St. Louis to See Western Conference Eleven in 1925.

A football game in St. Louis next fall between St. Louis University and a Big Ten Conference team looms as a highlight of the 1925 gridiron season.

H. J. McMahon, president of the St. Louis U. athletic board, and Head Coach Dan Savage returned to the city this morning from Chicago, and A. G. Eberle, faculty director of the athletic board, arrived from Kansas City, after attending the Big Ten and Missouri Valley Conference schedule meetings, respectively.

McMahon stated that he talked with representatives of three Big Ten teams, and prospects were good for games with two of the three, with one contest to be played in St. Louis.

Eberle's main purpose in going to Kansas City was to book a game with Missouri University. However, Athletic Director Brewer stated that the Tigers would consider playing an eleven as strong as the Billikens only late in the season, after the team had had time to get in good shape, and that most of the late dates were filled with Valley Conference games.

Gibbons Favored at 5 to 2 to Outfight Kid Norfolk Tomorrow

Gibbons Has Lost Three Fights, but Has Never Been Knocked Out; Norfolk, Despite Impressive String of Victories, Has Been "Kayoed" Three Times.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Tommy Gibbons today was made a 2½-to-1 favorite over Kid Norfolk, real name William Ward, for their bout at Madison Square Garden, tomorrow night, despite the fact that the Baltimore black is such a notoriously troublesome customer in the ring that a number of aspirants to Jack Dempsey's title have sidestepped him.

Gibbons, who held Dempsey off for 15 rounds at Shelby a couple of years back, is trying to work into position from which his clamors for another match will receive attention. Norfolk has little to gain or lose either way, except wherwithal to keep the wolf away from his door.

Although the fight has been ballyhooed up as a great match between the country's leading light heavyweights, the sale of tickets has been slow.

Both in Good Condition.

GIBBONS.		NORFOLK.
31	Age	28
16½ in.	Neck	16½ in.
40 in.	Chest	normal 41 in.
42 in.	Chest	expanded 45 in.
14½ in.	Biceps	14½ in.
7¾ in.	Wrist	8 in.
19½ in.	Thigh	24 in.
15 in.	Calf	14 in.
8 in.	Ankle	11 in.
13 in.	Forearm	13 in.

Since 1913 Gibbons has sent many leading heavyweights to the floor for the count of ten, including among his victims Al Reich, Porky Flynn, Willie Meehan, Clay Turner, Pat McCarthy, George Asche, Joe Burke and Jim Tracey. Last spring he journeyed to England and sent down Jack Bloomfield at the International Exposition at Wimberly, receiving less than half of the $50,000 he had been promised.

Gibbons Beaten Three Times.

In his career he has lost three bouts, to Billy Miske in 1922 on a foul, a 15-round bout to Harry Greb in the same year, and the memorable battle at Shelby, Mont., to Champion Jack Dempsey. He outpointed Georges Carpentier, erstwhile light heavyweight champion, at Michigan City this year.

In 1922 Harry Wills, who recently eliminated Luis Angel Firpo from the forces of heavyweight contenders, knocked out Kid Norfolk in two rounds at Madison Square Garden, and sporting writers are still disagreed on how the thing happened. The knockout blow came to be known as the "invisible punch." Sam Langford sent him to the canvas in the second round of a battle in 1917 and Lee Anderson of Boston knocked him out in nine rounds.

Norfolk, however, has floored for the count such men as Arthur Pelkey, Tom Cowler, John Lester Johnson, George Ward, Wolf Larsen, Tiger Flowers, Tut Jackson, Jamaica Kid and Kid Nolan. He has fought 10-round no-decision contests with Harry Greb and Billy Miske and has gained decisions over Miske, Bill Tate and Battling Siki.

Fall River Wins From Indiana, 4-2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Fall River football club defeated the Indiana Flooring in an American Soccer League match by the score of 4 goals to 2.

The home team started with a rush, Shaw scoring off Magnuson's pass in two minutes. A fierce attack by Fall River yielded two corners, and then in five minutes the equalizing tally was made as Campbell turned in Lorimer's pass. Carlson of Indiana shot over the bar, a close call for the visitors. The champions tallied again after 25 minutes of play, when Lorimer converted Campbell's pass. Lorimer, again from Campbell, made it 3—1 for Fall River at half time.

For 20 minutes after the turn honors were fairly even. McCarthy missed a chance for Indiana, and Shaw, after fighting his way through, shot across the goal mouth. Fall River was leading, 4—1, after 25 minutes, as Campbell took the ball clear through and Lorimer counted for the third time. With four minutes to go, Schylander scored for Indiana off Shaw's pass.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

CHAS. W.—Dec. 4, 1884, fell on Thursday.

MRS. K.—Jan. 21, 1881, fell on Friday.

L. E. K.—The city of Chicago proper has an area of 123,382.9 acres and St. Louis proper has 39,040.0 acres.

PECK.—St. Louis University has a school of dentistry, as has Washington University. Write to either one for the information desired.

WIDOW.—The Elks Lodge is located at 3619 Lindell avenue. Write there for your Christmas basket. The Post-Dispatch also distributes baskets at Christmas time.

VOWEL. — "W" is sometimes used as a vowel. In uttering its sound, as in wit, the vocal cords are set in vibration with the lips in the position for oo of pool, but without the formation of the resonance-chamber necessary for a distinct, full-fledged vowel. The sound is thus really a "half u," instead of a "double yu," whence the name "labial semivowel." W stands in the same relation to u as y to i.

C. S. S. — American army casualties in the war with Germany follow: Killed in action, officers 1618, enlisted men 35,198; died of wound received in action, officers 604, enlisted men 13,152; died of disease, officers 1646, enlisted men 60,460; died of accident, officers 712, enlisted men 3738; drowned, officers 30, enlisted men 680; suicides, officers 135, enlisted men 835; murdered or homicides, officers 19, enlisted men 298; executed, officers 0, enlisted men 35; other causes, officers 3, enlisted men 274. Total of 4767 officers and 114,670 enlisted men. Total wounded officers 7293; enlisted men 190,657.

R. R.—The following is a recipe for Christmas plum pudding: One pound of butter, 1 pound of suet, free from strings and chopped fine; 1 pound sugar, 2½ pounds flour, 2 pounds raisins, seeded, chopped and dredged with flour; 1 pound currants, picked over carefully after they are washed; ¼ pound citron, shredded fine; 12 eggs, white and yolks beaten separately; 1 pint milk, 1 cup brandy, ½ oz. cloves, ¼ oz. mace, 2 grated nutmegs. Cream the butter and sugar, beat in the yolks when you have whipped them smooth and light; next put in the milk, then the flour, alternately with the beaten whites, then the brandy and spice, lastly the fruit, well dredged with flour. Mix all thoroughly; wring out your pudding cloth in hot water, flour well inside, pour in the mixture and boil 5 hours.

SIP.—The polishing of steel must always be preceded by a thorough smoothing either with oilstone dust, fine emery or coarse rouge. If any lines are left to be erased by means of fine rouge, the operation becomes tedious and is rarely successful. The oilstone dust is applied on an iron or copper polisher. When it is desired to preserve the angles sharp at a shoulder, for instance, the polisher should be of steel. When using diamantine an iron polisher, drawn out and flattened with a hammer, answers very well. With fine rouge, a bronze or bellmetal polisher is preferable for shoulders; and for flat surfaces discs or large zinc or tin polishers, although glass is preferable to either of these. After each operation with oilstone dust, coarse rouge, and the polisher cork must be changed and the object should be cleaned well, preferably by soaping, perfect cleanliness being essential to success. Fine rouge or diamantine should be made into a thick paste with oil; a little is then taken on the polisher or glass and worked until quite dry. As the object is thus not smeared over, a black polish is more readily obtained, and the process gets on better if the surface be cleaned from time to time.

A SUBSCRIBER FOR 20 YEARS.—What you should say in congratulating a bridal couple depends on how well you know one or both of them. But remember it is a breach of good manners to congratulate a bride on having secured a husband. If you are unknown to both of them it is not even necessary to give your name. You merely shake hands with the groom, say a formal word or two such as "Congratulations!" shake hands with the bride, say "I wish you every happiness!" and pass on. If you know them fairly well, you may say to him "I hope your good luck will stay with you always!" or "I certainly congratulate you!" and to her "I hope your whole life will be one long happiness." Or, if you are a woman and a relative or really close friend, you kiss the groom, saying: "All the luck in the world to you, dear——; she certainly is lovely!" Or, kissing the bride, "Mary, darling, every good wish in the world to you!"

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

WORRIED.—Two plus Wasserman means a very active germ.

W. H. B.—Try the following for your nerve condition: Take a dessert spoonful of nurophosphates three times a day before or between meals in a wine glass of water. This should relieve your condition.

MIDDLE AGE.—Try the following for the dry skin: Mutton tallow, one ounce, melted with two teaspoonfuls of glycerin and applied at bed time. For the wrinkles use the above formula and after washing same off massage wrinkles with cocoa butter.

J. I.—Try the following for the pin worms: Mercurial ointment, two ounces. Introduce small quantity on point of finger after the parts have been thoroughly cleaned with soap and water, rinsed with pure water and dried.

MANY THANKS.—You are evidently much below par. You should be examined for any organic or functional trouble, with correction, if possible. We suggest 1-30 grain strychnine pill or tablet every four hours and good nourishing food. Avoid tight-fitting shoes and gloves. Massage the feet. The following lotion applied and let dry on every three or four hours, if possible, may be useful: Mentholis, 2 drams; alcoholic q. s. acidi carbolic, ½ dram; pulv. zinci oxidi, ½ oz.; pulv. calaminae praep., 4 scruples; glycerin, 1 oz.; liq. calcis, enough added to make 8 ounces.

STOCK TRADE LIGHTER; LIST IRREGULAR

Profit-Taking in Early Market—Number of Specialties Up Sharply Late — Sterling Exchange Strong

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"Firmer call money, advancing exchanges, strength in commodities and continued irregularity in stocks were the features of the day's financial markets. The reactionary tendencies which became rather pronounced in the week-end stock market were even more noticeable during the early hours and the volume of trading went into a decided slump. Profit-taking and jabbing here and there by short sellers went on while those who still feel that the market's advance is by no means over, held off until they could make up their minds just what might happen. Despite the raising of the call money rate to 3½ per cent, however, and higher rates for time money and bankers' acceptances, fresh buying appeared in various parts of the stock list in the early afternoon and much of the early decline was made up. At the close the list was still irregular but a number of specialties were sharply higher and fractional gains in the main body of stocks exceeded the losses. In short, the tone improved and the volume of trading also increased, the turnover amounting to approximately 1,600,000 for the day. One day's market cannot, of course, be taken as a proof of anything; but it is evident that the market is by no means lacking in buying support on the set-backs. Bonds were moderately active. Liberties were a shade firmer, but rails were irregular.

Sterling in Further Advance.

"In an unusually active market the foreign exchanges, with a few exceptions, were strong. Sterling resumed its advance, moving up 1⅝ cents to $4.70¼, a new high level for the year and within less than 2 cents of the high point reached early last year. French francs, on the other hand, were rather heavy and after sinking 3½ points rallied a bit and at 5.40½ cents were 2½ points lower on the day. Other Europeans were mostly higher, features being a gain of ? points in Norwegian currency and a rise of 18 points in Spanish exchange. Whether the advance in sterling proves to have outrun for the time being the improvement in trade conditions remains to be seen. Meanwhile, of course, the British are making efforts to get it back to par, although they realize that it cannot be put there and maintained there just yet. French francs also may be a bit high in view of the fiscal problems yet to be solved, but the intention and the ability of the Government to support it should at least prevent any pronounced reaction.

Commodities Strong.

"With the final Government crop estimate published, trading in cotton was resumed on a large scale. The Government's estimate of a crop of 13,153,000 bales, which showed an increase of approximately 161,000 bales over the estimate of two weeks ago, was about 150,000 bales below the average of the private guesses. The result was a run-up of 100 points, or $5 a bale, for the active futures. Heavy profit-taking then ensued and about half of the gain was soon lost. At a late price of 23.46 cents, the January future was 51 points higher. For some time mill demand at around the present price levels has been good and with the uncertainty over the size of the crop out of the way the trade generally feels confident that spinning operations, now growing more active, ensure further improvement in the market.

COTTON PRICES ADVANCE ON GOVERNMENT CROP REPORT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—American cotton growers have produced a crop this year with a value of more than one and two-thirds billions of dollars for lint cotton, linters and cotton seed. A preliminary estimate of production, announced today by the Department of Agriculture, placed the quantity of lint cotton at 6,289,187,000 pounds, equivalent to 13,153,000 bales.

Based on the farm price of cotton on Dec. 1, which was 22.6 cents per pound, this year's production is valued at $1,421,356,262. In addition, the value of the cotton seed will be approximately $200,000,000, and the production of linter cotton probably will run into eight or nine hundred thousand bales.

This year's crop will be the fifth largest in history in point of value, being exceeded in the value by the crops of 1917, 1918, 1919 and 1923. In point of size the crop is the ninth largest grown, the record crop having been 16,135,000 bales in 1914.

Almost 93 per cent of this year's crop had been ginned prior to Dec. 1, the Census Bureau reporting the actual ginnings as 12,225,025 bales to that date. Last year 90.9 per cent of the crop had been ginned to Dec. 1 while in 1922 there had been ginned 95.8 per cent of the crop.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The cotton market opened steady today at unchanged prices to an advance of 8 points on pre-bureau covering, promoted by comparatively steady cables, reports of increased mill activity in Fall River and talk of a good tone in the opening stock market.

The bulge extended to 23.01c for January and 23.38c for March contracts soon after the opening, active months showing net advances of 4 to 8 points, but enough selling appeared to cause reactions of 3 or 4 points from the best before the end of the first hour. Liverpool reported a very quiet market awaiting the Government report.

The volume of business tapered off and the midafternoon market was comparatively quiet, with prices ruling around 23.48c for January, and the general list showing net advances of 45 to 54 points at 2 o'clock. After the first flurry of covering, the Government's crop and ginning figures appeared to have little effect on the market.

When trading on the New York Cotton Exchange was resumed after the 20-minute recess, during which the report was received and digested, prices shot up from ⅝c to ¾c a pound, sending the January quotation to 23.90c and May to 24.10c.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Coffee, Rio No. 7, 20⅝c; Santos No. 4, 26c; futures firm; December, 19.87c; May, 17.10c.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The raw sugar market was unchanged early today with no sales reported. Old crop Cuban was quoted at 6.15 duty paid on the spot, while the nearest shipment new crop Cuban was offered at 5.8c. A leading statistician estimated the 1924-25 Cuban crop at 4,620,428 tons, as against last year's outturn of 4,502,547 tons.

Renewed liquidation and hedge selling in the raw sugar futures, promoted by the larger crop estimates, caused a reaction of 3 to 7 points in these prices.

Sugar futures closed easy. Approximate sales, 17,000 tons. December, 4.18c; January, 2.30c; March, $3; May, $3.07.

RARE MANUSCRIPTS ON PUBLIC EXHIBITION

Display in New York Library Arranged By Trustees of Morgan Collection.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—The choicest of the Pierpont Morgan library's original manuscripts and drawings by British authors were offered for public view in the main exhibition hall of the New York Public Library today. It is the first general public showing of many works that are considered almost priceless. J. P. Morgan himself directed the selection and installation of the display.

The exhibition was arranged, however, by trustees, to whom, as a memorial to his father, Morgan last February deeded the $7,000,000 collection founded by the late J. Pierpont Morgan and the magnificent marble edifice near the Morgan family residence in the Old Murray Hill section, where the collection was housed.

When the memorial was turned over to trustees and Morgan waived all personal and legal rights to the property, it was indicated that the institution should be open for the use of scholars. But the public displayed such interest that it became necessary to restrict admission to accredited scholars and bibliophiles, for the presence of jostling crowds threatened the safety of the collection.

First Public Exhibition.

Public curiosity continued, however, until the trustees embarked on a policy of periodically exhibiting sections of the Morgan library in other public institutions. A display of rare American manuscripts at the New York Public Library last April and May was the first general public exhibition under the arrangement.

The present exhibition will remain on view until March 1. It consists of original manuscripts, documents and letters of 150 British authors, in prose, poem and drawing, displayed in a half hundred cases and panels. All are catalogued in sequence, from William Dunbar's fifteenth century manuscript "London, Thou Art the Flower of Cities All," to Andrew Lang's twentieth century "Ode to Golf" and Rudyard Kipling's "Verses Written From Nicholson's Almanac of Twelve Sports."

That Morgan had inherited from his father an almost boyish enthusiasm for rare manuscripts and drawings was evident to the small group of newspaper men whom he conducted through the exhibition before it was thrown open to the public.

"Paradise Lost" Manuscript.

"I really think they're awfully good," he said. And he seemed to have memorized the contents of each of the documents, in faded ink, most of them, and in all manner of script, from the flowing signature of Sir Thomas More on the lease of his home, Crosby Hall, in 1522, to the microscopic penmanship of Charlotte Bronte in the nineteenth century employed on "Arthuriana, or Odds and Ends."

"See, there is Milton's manuscript for Book One of 'Paradise Lost,' just as the printer received it," explained Morgan, while the newspaper men peered to make out the text of the dog-eared book that lay within a case.

"I say manuscript," continued the financier, "Milton having been blind at the time he dictated his work and this probably is the script of his sister, Anne, or his secretary.

Distribution of 17,000 Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival contribution lists by a force of 50 young women workers began today. These subscription blanks, which are the sole means of raising the annual fund to provide Christmas cheer for the city's unfortunate, will be placed in all stores and business establishments, so that anyone wishing to contribute may do so. Approximately $15,000 will be needed to successfully conduct this year's Festival, the twenty-fifth consecutive one to be given through the medium of the Post-Dispatch.

As in other years, the young women workers will not solicit or receive funds, and will leave subscription blanks only in places where they are welcome. Lists and contributions properly should be mailed or sent by messenger to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch. All will be acknowledge in the columns of the paper. The entire administration expense of the fund to the last detail is paid by the Post-Dispatch, and every penny of the money contributed is applied to the actual work of the various divisions of the Festival.

In addition to defraying the expenses of the fund, the Post-Dispatch annually contributes $500 to begin the list. Early donations, in addition to the customary $500 from the Post-Dispatch, include $25 from Henry W. Peters, $10 from Col. A. T. Perkins, $2 from H. M., and a last year's list from Powers-Weightman-Rosengarten employes, 300 South Broadway, amounting to $6. This gives the fund a total of $543 with which to launch its quarter-century endeavor to make certain that no man, woman or child in St. Louis, not otherwise provided for, shall lack a share of joy on Christmas day.

Applications for Christmas baskets may be sent in writing to the Basket List Committee, Post-Dispatch, or may be made in person at the Information Desk, first floor, Post-Dispatch Building, where Mrs. L. E. Mellick will be in charge between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. All requests must be in the hands of the committee not later than 5 p. m. on Thursday, Dec. 18. This closing date for receiving names has been set to enable the committee to make proper investigation of each case, and to allow time for the purchasing of supplies and packing of basket dinners.

WIFE ADMITS AIDING ARNOLD IN SLAYING

Woman, Found Living on Crusts, Says She Conspired to Kill Detective.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Mildred Arnold late today admitted to Chief of Detectives I. B. Walston that she conspired with her husband, W. H. Arnold, to lure Lawrence I. Hatfield, private detective, to a road near Grandview, Mo., Dec. 1, where Hatfield was slain by Arnold.

Suffering from hunger, Mrs. Arnold, with her daughter, Virginia, 2 years old, yesterday was found by the police in the home in Joplin of her second cousin, Wilbur W. Miles, a traveling salesman.

Mrs. Arnold and her child had been living in the Miles home almost eight days in privation without Miles' knowledge. When he returned home yesterday he discovered the mother and child there in hiding. They had been living on crusts from the kitchen pantry. He notified the police.

Threats by Husband Alleged.

Mrs. Arnold today admitted that most of her earlier story was untrue. Chief of Detectives I. B. Walston said. Her husband had threatened her several times, Mrs. Arnold told Chief Walston, he said, to kill her and her baby.

Mrs. Arnold admitted to Chief Walston that she had left the home of her parents in her husband's motor car. Previously she had said she arranged a meeting with Hatfield and that it was in Hatfield's car she drove to Grandview. She also said that later she left her husband's car, while earlier she had said she drove with her husband to Fort Scott, Kan., where he left her.

Her Story as Told in Joplin.

Clad in the dress she wore from Kansas City in flight with her husband, she related in the Joplin cell yesterday her story of the killing of Hatfield, Nov. 30, on a road near Grandview, Mo. Hatfield was shot to death in his motor car. Arnold, she said in her original story, deserted her near Fort Scott, Kan., late in the afternoon of the shooting, and left her with the coupe.

"Guess I'd Better Pull Out."

"I don't know where he went," Mrs. Arnold said when first questioned. "He left me on a road a mile south of Fort Scott saying, 'I guess I had better pull out before they get me.' I didn't know what to do. Then I remembered Mr. Miles, who works for the same company my husband worked for, and I drove to his house. He was not at home; his wife was in Montana, teaching school.

"My husband wouldn't have shot Lawrence Hatfield," Mrs. Arnold declared, "if Lawrence hadn't reached for a pistol. I was riding with Hatfield. My husband followed us. I believe he just wanted to settle things with Lawrence—talk things over, perhaps fight with him. My husband wouldn't have killed Lawrence if Lawrence hadn't tried to draw a gun.

"I had made the engagement with Lawrence," Mrs. Arnold said, 'to talk over employment with him. He said he believed he could get me a job. When I met him I didn't know my husband was across the street in a filling station. He was there, he told me afterward.

"He saw me get into Hatfield's car and drive away with him. He followed us. We were driving slowly on Grandview road when my husband drove up beside us and sounded his horn. Hatfield drove to the side of the road. He and my husband were abreast.

"Stop and Get Out."

"Lawrence applied his brakes and reached for his pistol. My husband cried, 'Don't shoot now. Get out, Lawrence, I'm telling you.'

"Hatfield drew his pistol. My husband fired five times through the window of the coupe. Lawrence fell into my arms. I held his head and talked to him. I wanted to see how badly he was hurt.

"My husband leaped out of his car and came to the door of Hatfield's car. He was very angry and commanded me to get out. I wouldn't go at first. He commanded me three times. At length I went with him. We went to my parents' home, got our baby and fled."

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

HE was lazy, too—not because he was born so, but because Nature puts laziness into the bones of growing boys. Once or twice he thought of making terms with his mother who had a small balance in the savings bank. Though her life in town had mellowed some of her country prejudices, he knew that Ma disapproved of every form of theatrical entertainment. It wasn't that which held Admah back. It was Ma's attitude toward the Stek family. Ma Stek, a thin, venomous woman with traces of Mabel's gipsy charm in her scrawny face, had taken umbrage. She had taken umbrage with a loud noise. The cause was of small consequence, but results were horrifying. She had returned Ma Holtz's clothes wringer by tossing it over the back fence. Whereupon Ma Holtz, not to be outdone by such primitive means of exchange, had returned Ma Stek's pie tins. The crash was heard a block beyond the Car Barns.

That trouble waned with winter, and it principally concerned Admah, who became a little more clandestine and apologetic each time he visited the Steks' porch. Mabel was the undisputed belle of Dutch Hill and she held court every evening in the sheltered space beyond the Holtz fence. Her admirers still included a number of musical high-school boys, but there were several older men whose manners made Admah wilt with a sense of his own inferiority. There was one of them who seemed quite senile—he must have been 40. He only came once, but in that session he beckoned to Admah as one would summon an idiot child and asked, "Do you work around here?"

That was the night when Pa Stek came home late from the factory and glared at his daughter's followers with solemn, terrible eyes. Hard faced, overtly muscular, he passed through the group as if he would tramp them out under his big shoes.

"Won't you sit down, Poppa?" Mabel asked nervously.

"Nope," said Pa, "an' none of the rest of you need stay settin' much longer."

During these exciting, unrequited evenings, Admah, like the parasite which a hopeless lover always is, became one-ideaed in the fixity of his purpose. He needed two dollars for tickets and another for general expenses.

And one afternoon as he shuffled by Macmurray's Theater he encountered Elmer, the boy roue. It happened casually, as one encounters a god stepping out of his machine.

"Hot stuff, those pepmints," began Elmer, who had a Yankee accent and knew the latest in American language.

"I ain't got no mo'—any mo' busted ones," said Admah defensively.

"Thirty-five cents." That was simple.

Papering the house meant nothing to Admah, save that it offered him a chance to sit among the Big Ones—for nothing! Elmer was waiting. His whole manner hinted at intrigue as he jerked his head nervously above a blue military collar and hissed.

"Is it a go?"

It was a go, and Admah knew nothing of the trade arrangements whereby Elmer obtained a requisition for two seats from Macmurray's box office. The candy-boy went home in a cloud of glory; and that night, having had it out with Ma and borrowed Jo's new brown shoes, he called on Miss Mabel Stek to keep an engagement which he had made with her earlier in the afternoon. He felt very formal, very much trussed up in his high collar; and under his arm he carried a box of caramels which he had bought of a local druggist, disdaining Ma's home production.

CHAPTER 12.

They started on their way at the hour when Dutch Hill's Quiet Set is thinking of going to bed. The thought that every window in the immediate neighborhood was goggling with eyes added considerably to the young adventurer's unease as he conducted Miss Mabel toward the bob-tailed car.

* * *

He strove to forget a song which the car barn quartette loved to harmonize; something comic about an Irishman named McManus who hired a dressuit for a ball and did fairly well until the trousers gave way; "There goes MacManus in a misfit suit o' clothes!"

All the way from the Steks' to the corner where the car stopped Admah had been tormented by a point of etiquette, gadding like an outlaw pin. Shouldn't Miss Mabel take his arm? Certainly she should take it. But how to make her? Almost as soon as they left the front door he crooked his left arm and held it like a maimed wing. She didn't notice it. Amiably unconscious of his intent, she walked along.

By the time they had stopped at Athens street to wait for the car, his arm had turned to a feelingless stone thing like the handle on a pitcher. Several times he had been on the point of saying, "Won't you take it?" But her unattainable person had cowed him into silence. She talked on impersonally, somehow increasing the distance between them. Admah, who had dreamed of this moment, had planned its every step, was actually glad when he heard the horse-car's doleful cowbell clanging toward them around the curve. . . He looked shyly up and realized her height. Her chin was on a level with his hat brim. She was rather awesomely handsome; she kept him crying into empty space. And the boy was a little hurt to recall how she ogled and flirted when the older men were about.

His adventure had already lost its sparkle when they reached Macmurray's Theater and he traded his slip for actual tickets. They were early. In fact Macmurray's had just opened its doors an instant before Admah passed in with his difficult partner. Elmer the usher sprang forward with the cheerful greeting, "Well, you folks ain't goin' to miss anything, are you?"

They were undoubtedly the first to arrive. Possibly there was to be no performance that evening. This thought added nothing to Admah's happiness as they sidled into Seats 9 and 11 on Row Q. When Miss Mabel had reached No. 11 she stood there calmly, pleasantly and made it plain that Admah was to help her off with her coat.

"Thank you," she said sweetly, and sat down.

"Don't mention it," he replied, and sat down, too.

He sat down on his hat and his candy. Immediate knowledge of what he had done affected him with a bitter stoicism. He'd remain seated, just as he was, concealing the awful evidence under his coat-tails. Miss Steck must never know. He could feel the soft mass beneath him, sinking deeper and deeper. But this passive martyrdom was not for long. The audience began thronging down the aisle; several people insisted on squeezing past 9 and 11 in order to reach 13 and 15.

"You'll have to get up," hissed Mabel, seeing that her cavalier showed no tendency to rise and let the others pass.

"Admah!" she had the poor taste to say, "you've been sitting on—"

"Yes, ma'am.' His response was defiant.

"Suppose you wrap them in this," she suggested, offering her program. "Or they'll be sticking to everything."

He made a bundle of his broken sweets and kicked the composition under a seat. But forgetfulness was impossible. Twenty-five cents gone—for what? Humiliation.

After that Macmurray's with its tinseled walls and flocks of goddesses swimming across the ceiling lost glamour for Admah Holtz. Something invisible, cold, impassable like a sheet of glass had fallen between him and his lady of Dutch Hill. Glory faded out of everything. Even the orchestra's brilliant version of "Poet and Peasant" failed to stimulate him to anything more than short replies to Miss Mabel's rather stilted observations. She grew vivacious, snapping her black eyes toward a stage box.

"The Garnett Peakes!" she whispered dramatically.

Sure enough, the Peakes had arrived. In that town they needed no introduction: they were like members of a royal family, faces made familiar by their illustrious light. From the instant of their arrival Mabel could talk about nothing else; she had a taste for grandeur and loved to pretend an acquaintance with important personages.

Up in the front box sat the once famous Sally Livingstone Peake, a beauty faded to the point where one must look twice to see traces of loveliness. Yet her eyes and her shoulders were expressive as she flirted with the rather heavy man on her right. He was not entirely unfamiliar to Admah; indeed, when he turned his head there was complete recognition. . . . The man who had come once to Mabel's porch and asked Admah if he worked around there.

Admah wanted to say something sarcastic to the effect that Bobby might come down and introduce them to Sassiety. But he held his tongue for lack of words. He was thinking of the day by the church door when Garnett Peake had been slim and rather swaggering as he followed his baby daughter to her christening. He was growing stout and bald and sullen. His appearance stirred the Dutch Hill boy to something of the same resentment he had felt when the older of the Peake girls, astride a stone lion by Helicon Park, had wanted to buy his peppermints and referred to him as the Candy Boy. But he had liked her little sister . . . . sitting there just like a doll, her pink hand reaching out for a gift of candy. The little one's hand had been so sweet to touch. No, he couldn't feel any resentment toward her. Possibly it was because, in accepting his present, she had put the Peakes in debt to the Holtzes.

The play was of no great importance to Admah Holtz. It was full of music and singers like a lively church choir in shocking skirts that showed what shouldn't be seen every time they whirled around. One funny man fell out of a balloon and landed on a glass roof; another one was Scotch and said "Hoot mon!" every time his kilts dropped off.

CHAPTER 13.

But who was the boy Admah to have tried poor Mabel Stek and found her wanting? Poor Mabel, indeed, and poor world we live in!

Another spring thaw had rutted into the Fort's soft clay and brought out scattered violets behind the negro cabins before Dutch Hill began to understand about Mabel. Her mother told Ma Holtz that she was away visiting Pa's folks in Cincinnati. Pa Stek took to corn whisky and some nights Admah could hear his monotonous grumble, either praying or swearing, on the other side of the chimney.

Once Admah met her coming up State street right around the corner of the new Federal Building. She had her hair all hunched up in the new way and a stylish hat on her head. There was something brilliant about her complexion and defiant about her walk. She swept by him, looking straight ahead. Gosh. . . . She must a' had on at least a hundred dollars' worth o' clothes! . . . And why didn't her folks say anythin' about her bein' back?

Another time he was certain he saw her driving behind two handsome bays out along the Eastern boulevard toward the new Casino. It might have been some other lady, but Admah was mighty sure it was Mabel. And that man beside her, smokin' a big cigar and drivin' with yaller gloves? It took some time to remember him. Then Admah knew—the sort of fat, stylish one who had come once to the Stek porch.

Late one night—that came in the middle of June—Dutch Hill was awakened by an explosion. It was one of those passionate family rows where people bare their hearts obscenely, leaving bad memories. Admah, who had drawn his bed up to the open kitchen door, because the night was sultry, was aroused by animal roars from the room beyond the partition. Something broke—some heavy wooden thing—then women's voices mingled in pleading screams. One of the voices he recognized, but it was distorted like a reflection in a crooked mirror.

". . . Poppa—I don't mean that. I didn't mean" . . .

FAMOUS WOMEN

COUNTESS OF SUFFOLK.

HENRIETTA, Countess of Suffolk, was born about 1688 and left an orphan at an early age. She married Charles Howard, who later became Earl of Suffolk and who treated her with great brutality. She later became one of the bedchamber women to the Princess of Wales, and attracted the admiration of the Prince, who later became George II of England. It is said of her that she was "damned to everlasting fame" because she was loved by a stupid and licentious monarch. When she finally left the court the daughters of George II are said to have lamented the fact that henceforth their mother would have to spend so many hours in the company of their father. Despite the circumstances surrounding her presence at the court, Lady Suffolk formed friendships with the leading men of England of her time and retained those friends after her retirement from the court. In 1735, two years after the death of the Earl of Suffolk, she married the Hon. George Berkley, youngest son of the Earl of Berkley, and was very happy in her second married. She died in 1767.

SOLUTION OF SATURDAY'S PUZZLE

The Irony of "Useful" Gifts

By Sophie Irene Loeb

A LITTLE mother, wrinkled and gray and weary, but with a smile that would melt your heart and would make tears come into your eyes because of its courage and beauty, was confiding in me the other day that she wished one of her children would buy her "a pretty feather for her hat" And thereby hangs a great, throbbing human interest story.

SOPHIE IRENE LOEB

This is a splendid family—hard-working—all of its members. And every Christmas they give each other gifts, and the mother they especially remember.

But the kind of gifts with which they have presented her have been the so-called "useful" things. Of course she could find no fault with them because she did need them. For instance, they gave her a carpet sweeper, a tablecloth, a set of baking pans, a sewing machine, and other implements of work! work! work!

She welcomed these things because she needed them. But they were articles that were necessary to the whole family as well.

They never reflected that perhaps her soul was simply starving for something truly personal—something that she, herself, might want—"a new feather for her hat," or a lovely dress, or a little lump sum of money that she could put in the bank to call her very own—that she might buy what she wished.

These children, if they were criticised for their inconsideration, would be horror-stricken because were not the presents they gave her practical and serviceable? They were!

But why make such things in the form of gifts to her? Why not, in the course of every-day say, "Mother, dear, I think this carpet sweeper will save your using the broom, so I brought it home to you." Or, "Instead of burning your fingers on the stove, here is a new toaster." "Our table cloths are beginning to look shabby, so I bought these."

And then, when that gift time came, why not forget about household and sordid work things of everyday and think only of the woman—the woman with longings she, perhaps, never dared express. Why not study her wishes and ascertain what would please her in that purely personal way?

I know there are many mothers—many people who are presented with so-called "useful and sensible" gifts, who are starved to death for the want of some things that would make them forget the constant worry of work and days of burdens.

Ah, there is indeed much to think about in connection with Christmas gifts. Too many of us wait for Christmas to give the thing that we should give some day during the year to lighten the trials and tribulations of the every-day—to alleviate hard work and make things easier.

That should not always be a source of Christmas gifts, but something that should be a manifestation of kindness of heart, all during the year, and not at a gift time.

By this, I do not mean that one is to be condemned for presenting the practical things. They are commendable, too. But there is many a longing one to whom you owe so much and to whom you have given presents that only reminded them of their labor.

A little reflection in the purchase of Christmas tokens is worth while. "A feather for her hat" or some similar thing may bring the sparkle of youth to her eyes, and a new vitality to her whole being. Another case, many, many times of our old school adage that the "beautiful is as useful as the useful."

SAYINGS OF MRS. SOLOMON

By HELEN ROWLAND

SWEET, my Daughter, are the uses of perversity. Yea, manifold!

Go to! A foolish wife seeketh to persuade her husband that a man must be worked, even as a clock must be wound, BACKWARD.

Hath she set her heart upon a limousine? Then doth she pretend to be enamoured of a touring car.

Doth she seek to turn his eyes AWAY from a blond? Then doth she praise her rival as the pink of pulchritude and call her as a "heart-breaker." And he is filled with stubbornness.

Doth she yearn for a trinket on her birthday? Then doth she urge him to save his shekels and to bestow on her "something useful," even a vacuum cleaner or a clothes wringer.

Doth she wish to persuade him to divulge a secret? Then doth she clothe herself with indifference, and assure him that her faith in him is boundless and that she "won't listen to a word."

Doth she desire him to forego the golf links on Sunday afternoon? Then doth she stubbornly insist that he "needs" exercise, and gently urge him to take up his clubs and depart. And the very way he decideth to spend the day at home!

Behold, now doth she make out her Christmas list for assistance. Yet, she putteth not down therein a single thing she desireth.

For, she knoweth that a man's favorite way of making his wife happy at Christmas is to find out all those things wherein she has set her heart—and then to give her something ELSE, with a "surprise" her.

And how shall he show his firmness, save by disregarding that which a woman willeth him to do, and proceeding [illegible] do it?

And how shall he show his wisdom, save by persuading her that his judgment is better than hers?

Verily, verily, the woman who knoweth how to [illegible] man, and then to permit herself to be overruled by his [illegible] and magnificent judgment, hath nothing more to learn [illegible] psychology!

For, lo, EVERY man is sixty mule-power!

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Speckled Lemons

If the lemons have specks on them, soak them a few minutes in cold water and scrub vigorously with a soft brush. This measure removes the specks and will not harm the lemon.

* * *

Keep It Cool.

A bowl of fruit is very attractive in the dining-room, but eaten rapidly it will cause decay. Perhaps it is wise, if you have big fruit eaters, to keep it in the cool pantry and serve it in other form of decoration.

* * *

Less Odorous.

Are you baking your cabbage this year instead of boiling it? Put it on top of the stove? It can be cooked in the oven just as you would bake potatoes, and it for boiling and very little odor will permeate the house. Cook very slowly for three hours.

* * *

Tarnished Silver.

When cleaning silver, put two quarts of water in an old tea kettle. Add two tablespoonfuls of soda, letting it boil. Then put the silver in and boil for a few minutes. This will not harm the silver but will remove the tarnish.

Stuffed Onion.

IT WILL be a nice change to stuff the onions for dinner. Select large onions and boil until tender, but do not let them break apart, then drain them. When cold remove the centers. If you have four onions chop the centers of three and add a cup of chopped cooked ham, season to taste and stir in the beaten yolk of one egg and cream to moisten. Fill onion shells with this mixture; put a piece of butter on top of each, set into baking dish, pour a little milk in the dish, cover and bake 20 minutes. Remove cover, sprinkle with buttered bread crumbs and bake 10 minutes longer.

Fire.

IN the icy season of Winter's reign, when the Storm King comes from his far domain and the North Wind vents his ire, men who muse at night by the hearth-light's glow should give thanks, when the fields are but drifted snow, to the god who brought them fire. Oh, the nights were long and the nights were cold, and the winds of the Winter were keen and bold as they raged over plain and hill. Then the forest depths saw the wild things creep, and man's thought's grew strange for he dared not sleep and his hunger fought with his will. Until down from the summits of heaven sped the god with his gift, like a flower, rose-red, with his flame for men's hearts' desire. . . . Just sometimes, as they drowse by the sun-bright rays, men should turn, in their thoughts, with a word of praise to the god who brought them fire.

Reddy's Worst Day

Regrets are vain. I beg you pause
Before for such you've given cause.
—Reddy Fox.

REDDY FOX and Mrs. Reddy slipped away from their home together, but they did not remain together long. Reddy knew that it was his fault that their home had been ruined and that they now must run for their lives. He insisted that Mrs. Reddy, who used to be Miss Swiftfoot, should get out of this trouble at the first opportunity. Mrs. Reddy was quite willing to do this. She knew that it would be foolish for them to stay together with Bowser the Hound and the other dogs on their trail. She is very shrewd, is Mrs. Reddy, and she suspected that her help might be needed later.

So when they came to a big rock she made a long jump to the top of it, while Reddy kept on around the bottom of it. From that rock she jumped to another, and from this jumped to an old log. Behind this she lay down flat. There she lay while Bowser the Hound and the other dogs, making a great racket with their deep voices, raced on after Reddy. You see, his trail was easy to follow, for the scent was fresh and strong. Mrs. Reddy was safe and knew that she was safe.

But it was very difficult with Reddy. He knew Bowser the Hound of old. He knew how wonderful was Bowser's nose and how patient Bowser could be. Had there been only Bowser after him he would not have worried much. He had fooled Bowser many times before, and he was sure that he could fool Bowser again. But Bowser was not alone. There were several other dogs, all with good noses. Reddy knew that when he played one of his clever tricks to break his trail those dogs would scatter and the chances were that one of them would quickly find it again. Then, too, there were those hunters with terrible guns to watch out for. So Reddy decided that the first thing to do was to get as far from the Old Pasture as possible.

Now, Reddy was in splendid condition. For awhile he went straight away and had no trouble in keeping ahead of those dogs. But after awhile, when he was far from the Old Pasture, he grew tired. The voices of those dogs kept sounding nearer and nearer. He must use his wits and puzzle them, so as to gain time to rest a little. He turned and swiftly ran back along his own trail until he was in danger of meeting those dogs. Then he leaped as far to one side as he could and ran with all his might.

For awhile he went straight and had no trouble in keeping ahead of those dogs

The trick worked, as he was sure it would. The dogs in the excitement of the chase kept on to the point where Reddy had turned. There a sudden silence fell. Reddy's trail had ended as suddenly as if he had taken wings. But the dogs knew that he hadn't. They scattered out in all directions, their noses to the ground. Bowser, wise in the ways of Reddy Fox, was the only one to guess what Reddy had done. He turned and began to work back the way he had come. His wonderful nose found Reddy's scent twice as strong as it had been when they had first started after him.

In a few minutes that scent grew weaker again. Bowser knew then just what Reddy had done. He left the trail and began to trot in a big circle, with his nose to the ground. So it was that presently he picked up Reddy's trail again and with a roar of his great voice called the other dogs to join him.

Reddy's rest had been short, but it had helped. He knew already that he was in for the worst day of his life. He knew that to fool all those dogs and to keep out of sight of those hunters would take all the wit he possessed.

It is, for instance, the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself. If eau de Cologne be poured into the nostril, the nose refuses to recognize any odor there at all.

Dear Editor:

SEVERAL of my readers has recently wrote in and made a squawk because I been writing about 2 sports namely golf and football as played abroad and have not wrote nothing in regards to their favorite sports namely polo and tennis and ten pins.

Well friends I apologize for the oversight, but I can rectify the mistake as I seen a good deal of all these games on the other side of the old pond as I have so aptly named it and I just as soon say a few words in regards to how these sports differs over there than how they are played here.

The hot bed of polo at the present time is Africa where the players rides on giraffes instead of ponies and uses fish poles instead of mallets. The balls are made of steel and the smart players have magnets fastened onto the end of their fish poles and it is very amusing when one of the dumbell players with no magnets think they are going to hit the ball and one of the smart players points his magnetic pole at the ball and the last named jumps right at him.

The Prince of Wales is not allowed to play polo in Africa, as falling off of a giraffe is a different matter than falling off a little bit of a pony.

Where the Prince is allowed to play is Belgium, where the polo promoter insists on the players riding in tanks left over from the war. The Prince is put in a tank and then the tank is locked up and the keys given into the possession of his parents until the game is over.

But in order to get to Belgium from England you have got to cross over on a ferry and it's no small trick to stay on a ferry a specially in rough weather. So they have now got inventors working on a game that can be played right in London and the most likely one so far suggested is a game where the players rides in taxi cabs. As soon as the whistle blows for the opening of the first chukker the cab starts off pell mell down pall mall and the player don't dast fall out because the driver is watching him like a hawk for the fear he won't get his fare.

In Russia they are playing polo in box cars and instead of a referee or field judge or whatever you call them, these games is ran by a train dispatcher.

In Roumania one team rides on sheep and the other team on wolves and the battle between the mounts is sometimes a great deal more exciting than the game itself.

The only games of tennis I seen acrost the pond was in la belle France and they have got 2 new sets of rules there, one for female players and one for male players. Under the female rules a doctor is stationed at each end of the court and the instant the player shows signs of swooning the doctor applies smelling salts and etc. and if she don't swoon it is her point. If she does swoon a fault is called on her doctor and the point goes to the opponent.

The new rule in male tennis is to hang up the net very high and instead of trying to put the ball over the net you are supposed to put it under. This is expected to give a big advantage to MMS. La Coste and Borotra the next time they's an American invasion. One of the tennis experts on the Matin told me that the French players was making practally nothing but service aces since the net was lifted.

Ten pins is played chiefly in the Dark Forest and the object of the game is to knock down as many trees as possible with a medicine ball. Duck pins is also popular in Russia. A player throws a coupling pin at you and if you duck he throws another. This keeps up till you don't duck in time.

In London (Eng.) the American colony is having great sport with the new brand of hop Scotch. The object is to see who can take the most shots of hop and wash it down with Scotch.

The Londoners themselfs depends for their amusement on hide and seek which is played day times right out in the main streets. It is vs. the rules to hide behind anything but the fog which is plenty. It is sometimes a matter of 5 or 6 months before they's enough light so as the man who is it can find anybody.

American football is rapidly catching on in Paris and this writer predicts that within a yr. or 2 the Parisian backs will be making Red Grange look like a coal barge. The French coaches makes their backfield men put in 7 hours a day going back and 4th. acrost the main rues and those that ain't killed by a taxi the first 3 or 4 days has certainly proved that they have got enough speed and can dodge enough to make any All-American team in the world.

In both France and England they sems to be a lot of excitement over a sport they call weight lifting. The contestants buys ringside seats at heavyweight bouts in which a Frenchman or Englishman is opposed by an American and the contest is won by the first contestant that gets into the ring and lifts the local man off of the floor and carries him to his corner.

It is rumored that Santa Claus has had his whiskers bobbed and will make his deliveries this year with a bob-sled instead of a sleigh.

But, come as he may, he'll be welcome Christmas evening at Maggie Murphy's home.

Like the characters in the comic strips, Santa Claus holds his age remarkably well. He hasn't changed a bit in all the years that we've known him.

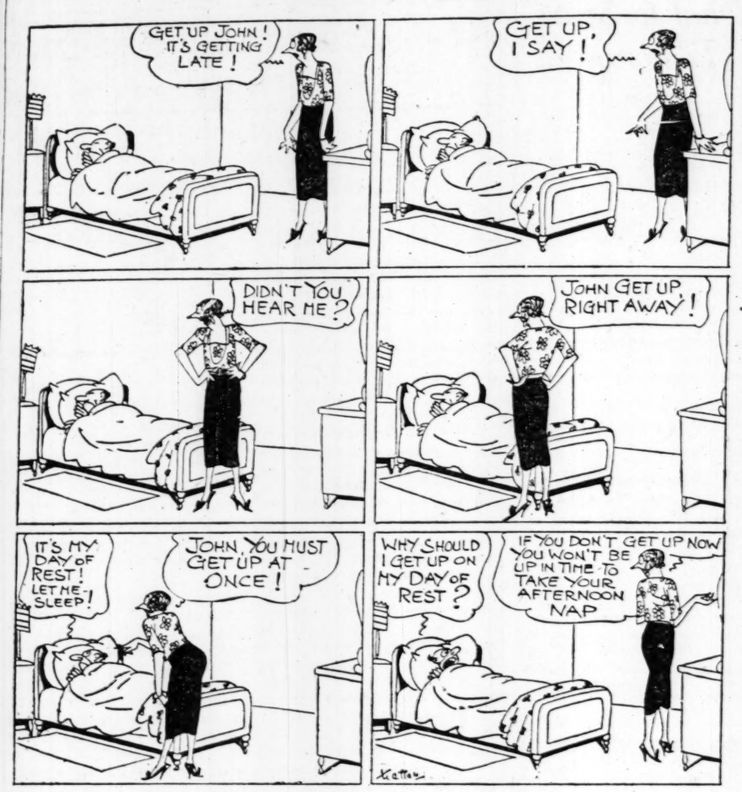

The man on the sandbox says that Cal Coolidge makes all former watch dogs of the Treasury look like spendthrifts. Long may he.

If it hadn't been for the cross-word puzzles we should probably have gone through life and died without ever knowing that one of a series of low steps is a "Gradin." Such is life.

And, since learning that "Ra" is the Memphite god of the midday sun, we feel strangely uplifted and capable of doing better and nobler things.

To "Al," the popular and justly famous three-toed sloth, we also are indebted for a broader and more comprehensive view of things in general and words of one syllable in particular.

BANK DEPOSIT SLIPS OF 'FIXER' ON ALLEGED BRIBE DATE EXHIBITED

MERRY HOTEL PARTY DESCRIBED TO JURY

Mortimer Says Veterans' Bureau Head Won $220 From Wife Shooting Dice and He Had to Pay.

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Dec. 9.—The spectacular duel between Elias H. Mortimer and counsel for Charles R. Forbes continued today in the Government's conspiracy case against the former Veterans' Bureau head and John W. Thompson, St. Louis contractor, in the course of which Mortimer managed to tell that Forbes won $220 from Mrs. Mortimer shooting craps. This was on the same night that he gave Forbes $5000 from Thompson, he said.

At the afternoon session Special Prosecutor Poiter produced three of Mortimer's bank deposit slips, dated June 20, 1922, showing deposits totaling $5100 on that date, the date he said Thompson gave him the money. All Mortimer's cancelled checks, drawn between July 1 and Oct. 1, of that year, were also produced.

Earlier today Mortimer told of taking Thompson and James W. Black of St. Louis to see Forbes at the Veterans' Bureau at night. He said Forbes knew Black by reputation but had never heard of Thompson.

"Thompson told him he had built nearly all the railroad stations in Texas, and had done a lot of cantonment work for the Government during the war," the witness said.

"Was your conversation with Forbes at Atlantic City the first time you discussed splitting money?" he asked asked. "No, that's the first time we agreed on the exact split."

"When was your first corrupt proposal made to him?" Mortimer replied it was in March, a month after he met Forbes. "I brought him along gradually, feeling him out to see how far I could go with him," he explained.

Shoreham Conference.

In March, he said, he informed Forbes that Thompson and Black were coming to Washington and he expected to represent them in obtaining hospital contracts. Black, Mortimer and Thompson, at a conference at the Shoreham Hotel, Washington, about April 12, 1922, agreed upon 35 per cent of the profits as Mortimer's share for obtaining contracts, he said.

Easby-Smith of defense counsel asked if he considered this "a fair and reasonable" arrangement. Mortimer said he did. Judge Carpenter intervened and with ironic gravity observed that he was not "so much interested in learning whether the witness thought it fair and reasonable as I am in learning whether it was the usual and customary thing in Washington." It was entirely lost on Mortimer. He solemnly assured the court that there was nothing unusual either in the practice or the percentage.

Skipping a long interval, counsel asked Mortimer about his charge that papers were stolen from him and given to Forbes. Mortimer said he missed papers in his apartment Sept. 21, 1922, and discovered next day that other papers had been taken from his safety deposit box, to which only Mrs. Mortimer, besides himself, had a key. These, he said, were papers containing incriminating evidence against Forbes.

Drake Hotel Episode.

The defense then began a severe and minute examination of Mortimer on dates, places and circumstances surrounding Mortimer's alleged payment of $5000 to Forbes in the Drake Hotel, in June, 1922.

For the defense, this is the heart of the case, and it was making a desperate effort to crack Mortimer's story on that point. He had testified before a Senate committee last year that he gave the money to Forbes on June 19. It is known that Forbes was a guest at the South Shore Country Club on that night and therefore could not have been at the Drake. To that extent he had an alibi.

In his testimony here, however, Mortimer said the date was June 20, and volunteered the statement that he had been mistaken in his previous testimony. Easby-Smith
